"I have no reason to doubt your sincerity, Mr. Hankinson," said the young lady, with unaffected sadness, "but I saw you in that imateur game at the park last Saturday, and ny feelings towards you have undergone a dimange. A young man that can's scal a bag ou that one-eyed duffer, Limber Jim, and strikes out six times when Pudding Jake is in the box, is no good. I am sorry, Mr. Hankin-son, but I can't sign you as a husband." These are two of the secrets of Capt. Com-iskey's success : First, he insists upon being obeyed implicity and assumes all responsibil-ity; second, he never orders one of his men to do what be would not do limself.—bat is, he sets the example and his men follow him, having unbounded confidence in his judg-ment, shrewdness, nerve and daring.
