The subject was admirably treat-ed by Prof. W. H. Ellis of the School of Practical Science. In an Inour's discourse illustrated by specially prepared slides. Practical Science. In an mour's discourse fillustrated by specially prepared slides, shown by a capital lantern, those present were told the history, modes of preparation and special qualities of these three well-nigh ladispensable bewerages.

Discovery of the Three Plants.

After finding stimulation and refreshment in some kind of distilled liquor through many centuries, plants were discovered in Asia and Africa, and later in America, whose leaves or fruits were possessed of stimulating properties, which supplied to a considerable extent the need which had been met in Europe by alcohol. The tea plant is indigenous in Asia, coffee plant in Africa and coocs plant in America. The beverages obtained from these three plants were stimulating and refreshing when taken in moderation, but used in large quantities are injurious and induce paralysis. The tea bush grows wild in India; in China and Japan it is cultivated over wide districts. The best Indian tea is grown on fertile plains which are well manured. The younger the leaf the better the tea. Green teas are obtained from the same plant as the black, The method of preparing and mixing, which the lecturer explained in detail, accounts for the difference in color. The leaves, withered by heat and subjected to fermentation, become black. Nearly all the tea obtained from Japan is green. Owing to the method of conveyance the tea are eaten as soup.

Tea Adulteration. Discovery of the Three Plants.

Tea Adulteration.

Prof. Ellis said: "I do not know any article in modern use which is less adulterated than tea. The coloring produced by gypsum and Prussian blue is really, harmless. This is done to improve the look of the article for the European. "Still the practice should not be encouraged, for it enables the natives to pass off inferior tea as better qualities, each having the same appearance. The Chinese g the same appearance. The Chinese use colored tea."

Evil effects on the nervous system from over-indulgence in tea are trembling and wakefulness. Green tea acts more powerfully on the nerves than black, owing to the double percentage of the presence of the double percentage of the presence of an essential oil.

Much Adultarated Coffee Coffee is one of the most largely adulterated articles of consumption; but the chicory is generally used is harmless. Pure coffee floats and scarcely colors the water. Bran and starch are used to give the thick and dark appearance).

Coffee has twice the stimulating strength of tea, and over-indulgence in this favorite beverage produces similar injurious effects on the nervous system.

No Milk With Cocoa.

Cocoa is noted for its fat. This is not bresent in tea, and only to a small extent in coffee. Cocoa is recommended to invalids for its nutritive qualities; but owing to the large quantity of albuminoids it is indigestible to many patients. It is a useful nourishing food, but not to the extent generally believed. The various preparations of cocoa were explained. The professor emphatically said: "To drink cocoa with milk is a great mistake. It contains too much fat to commence with, and to super-add milk is carrying coals to Newcastle. Prepared simply with water it is much more wholesome. Chocolate is ecoca paste mixed with sugar and starch."

On the motion of Prof. Ramsay Wright the thanks of the interested audience were given to Prof. Ellis for his lucid and instructive lecture. No Milk With Cocoa.

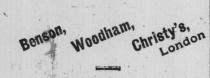

Calfakins Should Be Uniform.

The Tamners' and Leather Dealers' section of the Board of Trade met yesterday. There was considerable discussion on credits and discounts, and finally an agreement was arrived at which will go into effect on May 1.

A resolution was adopted regarding standards for the classification and measurement of hemlock bark. (The Executive is asked to report on the advisability of asking the Dominion Government to enforce the Inspection Act, and to make the inspection of Canadian hides and calfskins uniform.
