Then I began to realize for the first time where I was and what I had done. And if I had felt just as I did then and there had been time to back out I believe I would have done so. But I was in for it now. I thought of poor Jim, and that brought me up again, and I went on to the stateroom. There was only five boys, and we got the flag away without any break.

I felt Bonnie Belle bound under me like a hawk at spring. She did not seem to weigh more than a feather. At the first quarter we were all in a bunch. I was holding Bonnie Belle back just as Mr. Thurston had done. Just before we got to the half-mile Trojans jockey began to let him out. The other boys crept up a little. I kept on holding back. Before we got to the three-quarters they were all dead of me. But Bonnie Belle was pulling hard, and when we ran the mile she had passed all but Trojan. He was a length ahead and going for all that was in him. It was just before we turned into the stretch that there was a two length between us. I could not wait any longer. I let her go.

Now I saw I. Now! Good girl! Win! Win for Jim and me!

It seems almost as if she flew, but that black devil ahead was aying too. She got her nose nearly up to the goal line, then she could not get no further. An awful fear took hold of me. There was the finish line only a furlong off. I could feel that Bonnie Belle was doing her level best, and she was not gaining an inch. I was on my feet in a flash, just as they folks see things when they die. Jim's pale face with that heart-break look on his face, the note du jour, Jim arrested in prison, our whole lives black, black forever, and still that beast kept ahead. It seemed as if he had a hundred devils inside of him.

I fell on my knees! Bonnie Belle flew on like a bird. Trojans still held his half a length. And the crowd kept shouting: Trojans! Trojans! Trojans!

All at once something seemed to take hold of me. I just got desperate. I brought the whip down on Bonnie Belle with all my might and sent in the spins.

Now Bonnie! Now! For Jim's sake! For God's sake! You must win! You shall win! O God, help us to win!

I could not only gasp the words, but I will always believe that Bonnie Belle understood. Two jumps more and she was at Trojan's neck. All her blue blood was up. Another jump and she was even. One more and I lashed her under the finish-line first by a head. The race was mine, and Jim was saved.

I never was much on praying, and I have never made no profession. But when I prayed for that race, I believe God heard me. The person say He does not take much stock in horse racing. But he helped me that day sure. And when I pulled Bonnie Belle back to the back of the pack, I felt like I just kept saying over and over, Thank God! Thank God! Thank God!

They said the people went plumb crazy but did not hear them. They did not hear anything, nor see anything. Only I could go back and tell Jim.

How I ever got down and weighed out I do not know. It had to be done. Then I opened my eyes. I believe God heard me when I stepped off the scales, I could not know nothing more till I felt somebody trying to pour something down my throat. Then I opened my eyes. There was Thurston, and he weighed two and three jockeys. They said I had tumbled down in a dead faint, and they had took me up and put me on a bench. They were the most amazed crowd I ever saw in my life ever saw, because when they lifted me my cap had fell off, and down had come my hair. Then is all I could say I say to Mr. Thurston: Is it all right? Did I win?

Well, says he, you won, but I don't know whether it is all right or not. Who by ye? I am Collins, all right, says I, because I knowed that was the name that was for Bonnie Belle's rider. But I am not Jim Collins. I am Sam Thurston, Jim's wife.

Well, says Thurston, if your name is Collins the race is all right. But where is your husband? Why did not he ride?

I will tell you all about it, says I. It is no more than right that you should know. So I up and told them the story, name as I have told it to you, and it just seemed to break them all up.

You see, says I, that race was run for the stakes that you knowed anything about. And you won them fair and square, says a voice just behind me. I turned around, and what do you think I see? Bonnie Belle! No. How could Jim have got there? It was old Joe Lawton. You see, old Joe Lawton, and you do know the tears were just a running out of his eyes. He come up to the bench and says he, but I take him by the hand and says he, but I take him by a damned occasion, and I am willing to get down on my knees and call you son. God knows I did not mean to do it.

If you had have only listened to Jim, says I.

Yes, I know, girl, I know, says he. But I didn't. The only thing I did was to try and make it up to him. And then he just gathered me up in his arms. You blessed little woman! says he. You have got the stake in my eye. I would back you every time.

That is all right, says I, but we are a long time. I want to go and tell Jim. Now you give me the money, so as I can take it to him. Mr. Thurston says he will do it for me. I would back you every time.

Certainly I will, and he did. So the doctor the had got around by that time, and he was wearing the colors. He was away and was wondering what had become of me, when I walks and holds the fifteen hundred dollars right before his eyes. Then he had to be told of course. We all took a hand at telling him. Jim just looked from one to the other, and never said a word.

Do not you catch on old man! says Lawton. Do not you take it in! Let me the race, and won it, too, like a lady, and here is the money, which you do not pay a cent of to nobody. I have got the rights of your story now, and as soon as you are well I am going to take you back home with me and I am going to try and get even for having treated you so mean. Do you understand now?

And Jim he never said a word. He just smiled, and old Joe Lawton bent over and kissed him. Margaret Manton Merrill in Harper's Weekly.

Now Well and Strong.

STEPHEN, a well known and recommended B.B.F. For two years I was crippled with an inflammatory disorder of the kidney from which bottles of B.B.F. entirely freed me. I am now well and strong and gladly recommend this medicine to all who are afflicted with it. I had almost given up hope. Edward Johnson, Aberdeen, S. C.

The latest news wrinkle is the burial of the dead in glass, instead of wooden coffins. The glass cases is believed, will not only preserve the bodies like so many mummies for an indefinite period of time, but prevent the diffusion through the air and soil of the putrid gases arising from decomposition and so injurious to the health of the living.

THE SISTERS OF PROVIDENCE.

An interesting chat with the Secretary of St. Mary's.

She explains why the Sisters and their Pupils are so highly respected in the city, and the information of value to everybody.

From Terre Haute, Ind., Express.

Four miles to the southwest of Terre Haute, lies the beautiful and picturesque village of St. Mary's. This is a Roman Catholic institution which has attained something more than national celebrity. Fifty years ago it was established by six Sisters of Providence, who came from the shores of France to lay the foundation for this great charitable order. It now consists of the home of the Sisters of Providence, known as the Providence House; a large female seminary, one of the finest in the United States, and a Rectory in which the priests make their home.

A reporter of the Express while being shown through the establishment recently asked Sister Mary Anne if there was any special reason for the good health with which the sisters and their pupils are blessed.

The answer was that particular attention is paid by the sisters to the health and happiness of the students. "Bodily health," she said, "cannot help but have its effect on the mind. In order to keep the mind bright and active and perfectly clear at all times, the students' conditions must be as nearly perfect as possible. Some time ago there was more or less ailments noticed among the sisters and students, which was probably due to atmospheric causes, though of course I do not know just what the origin really was. Shortly after this became noticeable a friend highly recommended a medicine called Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People and so urged upon me to give them a trial that I ordered some of them, and they have been used in the institution ever since. A few days after the manifestations for an opinion of Pink Pills, and my reply was as follows:

"I have just received your kind request for an opinion of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and please to say that these pills are so highly recommended to us that we were induced to try them, and we think our repeated orders for them warranted. We have found that we did find them as they are represented, a good blood builder and an excellent nerve tonic.

Years very respectfully,
Sister M. Anniston,
Secretary of Sisters of Providence."

Medical scientists concede that weak blood and shallow nerves are the fruit of a disease that nearly every disease to which human flesh is heir, and if Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People are not used, the patient is doomed to a life of suffering and misery. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are a true cure for the greatest medical diseases of the age. They are the beginning of a more healthful era. Every day brings reports of remarkable cures that have resulted from the use of this wonderful medicine. In many cases the greatest physicians had failed, and the patient, who had been given up as incurable, was cured by the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. It is an unsolicited specific for such diseases as locomotor ataxia, partial paralysis, St. Vitus' dance, sciatica, neuralgia, rheumatism, nervous headache, the after effects of a gripe, palpitation of the heart, that tired feeling resulting from nervous prostration; all kinds of neuralgia, and all forms of weakness, irregularities, such as scrofula, chronic erysipelas, etc. They also cure the most obstinate cases of indigestion, such as dyspepsia, indigestion, flatulence, and all forms of indigestion, and they build up the blood and restore the glow of health to pale or yellow cheeks. In the case of women, they cure the most obstinate cases of indigestion, such as dyspepsia, indigestion, flatulence, and all forms of indigestion, and they build up the blood and restore the glow of health to pale or yellow cheeks.
