

The Last Watch

For the grass is full of slumber
In the twilight world for me,
And my tired hands are slackened
From their toiling on the sea.