It is cause for much thankfulness that, although our great men are passing away, a new race of still greater men and women are in training. We don't believe the world is growing worse, but better. This improvement is due, in great measure, to school-teachers. "Boodle" aldermen and defaulting cashiers often fill the whole horizon of our view, and we all say in haste, "All men are liars," but the conclusion is false, only some men are liars, and some children are trained to fill the generation of criminals now on the stage of action. Teachers, take courage.—Teacher's Institute.

Cashmere shawls are made from the wool of the Cashmere goat, which lives in the Cashmere Valley, Tibet, and Tartary. Only the summer wool is used, and this is bleached by a preparation of rice flour. For each colored thread a different needle is used. The process is so slow that when the design is elaborate, the completion of one square inch will occupy three persons for a day, and a shawl of remarkable beauty would take this number of years for its execution. Only the inner side of the shawl is exposed to the view of the workman, he being guided by the pattern placed before him and a skill-supervisor of the work. Shawls that are worked with the needle are, however, far inferior to those in which the pattern is woven in.
