

sound strange. The greater danger lies in the lack of organization on the part of Knox men. They are said to be lacking in esprit de corps. With them the Church is first, the College second. They have yielded many a point for the sake of peace, and the College has suffered. Many of them support all colleges alike, as being institutions of the Church.

The Alumni Association, although having a nominal existence for a number of years, is only beginning to exert its influence. Within the last two or three years rapid strides have been made. The bond of union to the College has been strengthened. Large enterprises have been undertaken by the Alumni. They sent out the first college missionary. They conduct a monthly magazine, published throughout the year. Their next move will be in the interest of the library. There is no ground whatever for complaint.

The attention of the Alumni is called to the letter from Mr. Freeman, Secretary of the Association, on another page. On reading the programme there outlined it will be seen that subjects of great importance will be presented for discussion at the April meeting. Programmes, railway certificates, etc., will be sent to all graduates, and a good, rousing meeting may be expected.

REPRESENTATION ON THE SENATE.

WE have been asked to call the attention of graduates of Knox College to the question of representation on the College Senate. As explained in Mr. Freeman's letter, the Alumni Association have now the right to nominate three of their members to represent them on the Senate, subject to appointment of the General Assembly. Ballot papers, with the names of those nominated at the last meeting of the Association, have been sent to all voters. It is necessary that these be returned to the Secretary before the date specified. As explained, members not named on the ballot paper are eligible for nomination and may be voted for. It is hoped that every graduate will attend to this somewhat important matter at once. The results of the election will be made known at the Alumni meeting.
