Sir George Murray's Report

Sir George Murray, of the Treasury Department of the United Kingdom, was invited by the Premier, during the latter's recent visit to Great Britain, to report upon the system of administering the Canadian Service.

The Editors of the Civilian being impressed with the importance of the report of Sir George Murray which was laid on the table of the House of Commons by the Premier on Thursday the 12th instant, and considering it desirable that it should be read by as many of the service as possible, have decided to devote the present issue to the purpose of printing it in full. Comment upon the various subjects discussed will be deferred for a future occasion.

The Editors take the opportunity to wish the members of the service a Happy New Year.
