

A—She should, positively so.

Q—Does an introduction in the ball-room for the purpose of dancing entitle a gentleman to afterward claim acquaintance with a partner?

A—It does not ; all intimacy should end with the dance.

Q—In case a gentleman has two ladies in charge, may he in the absence of friends address a stranger, and offer him a partner?

A—He may, at the same time asking him his name previous to an introduction, and mentioning that of the lady to him, or not, as he may think proper.
