favourite Purpose, as the Doctor would have it believed. Nor did the Mission miscarry for Want of due Support, as he leads his Readers to imagine it did. What he quotes from Mr. Apthorp, that from the latest Accounts we find this Mission much dwindled, or greatly interrupted, relates to the State of Things brought on 18 Years afterwards by the late War. Mr. Barclay's Million was carried on with feeming Success till about the Year 1745, by which Time the French had infused such dreadful Imaginations into our Indians, and incited their own to fuch Violences, that it was no longer fafe for Mr. Barclay to stay amongst them. There is therefore not the least Ground for the Doctor's Pretence, that the Indians did not think the English in Earnest, or that the French made their Advantage of any Negligence of the Society. Instead of despising what the Society was doing, they were alarmed at it, and employed both all their usual Arts and open Force to defeat it. However, Mr. Oel, a German Clergyman appointed by the Socicty, staid with the Indians during the War, in which they were faithful to this Country. And he, and Paulus, a Mobock, whom the Society made Schoolmaster, were still doing the best they could there when the last Accounts came. Mr. Barclay being settled at New-York in 1746, Mr. Ogilvie was sent in his stead to the Indians in 1748, who found that many of them were removed into the French Territory, and the rest so much addicted to Drunkenness, which hath fince destroyed a great Part of them, that he had little Hopes, excepting from the Children, and not much from them, unless they were maintained in Houses appropriated to their Instruction. Now this Undertaking would not only be excessively expensive, particularly because the Parents must be well entertained as often as they pleased to visit their Children, but in all Likelihood fruitless, considering their Dispositions with respect to their Children already mentioned. Mr. Ogilvie took one by Way of Trial, cloathed. maintained and instructed him. But his Friends ferched him away, lest he should learn to despise his own Nation: Notwithslanding all this, Mr. Ogilvie continued his Endeavours there, till he was carried off in 1758 for his Majesty's Service, by the Commander in Chief of his Forces in those Parts. There are still, or lately were, Hopes of his Re-
