

were in operation in 1880, for the use of the tribes, exclusive of the five civilized tribes in the Indian territory. Seven thousand children attended these schools, and they were taught by 338 teachers.

Indians should have land in severality like the whites and be held subject to the laws of the whites, and protected by the same laws. A great demand for land in severality, is now being made by the Indians, and their demand should be complied with.

NUMBER OF SIOUX.

There are about 32,282 Sioux in the country. The report of the Indian commissioner says: "They are located in severalty, live in houses, wear citizen's dress, send their children to school, own farming implements and stock, and their crops during the year 1880 will average ten bushels of wheat, five of corn, and sixteen bushels of vegetables to each member of tribe. They also act as freighters and have public regulations like the whites. The progress of the Indians in civilization, during the past five years, is highly gratifying and satisfactory.
