MODERN SUBMARINE TREASURE HUNTERS

deet), and cargoes from a still greater depth.

Mr. R. H. Davis, managing director of Siebe, Gorman & Co., the well-known submarine engineers, writes:

Salvage operations were rendered possible only by the invention of the diving helmet in 1819, and the improved and remable diving dress in 1837. Attempts were made in remote ages, with more or less success, to work under water with the help of air tubes. Divers played a useful part in the operations against Tyre and Syracuse (333 B.C. and 215 B.C., respectively), tho it is not clear what apparatus was used, if any.

Since the advent of the modern diving equipment, there have been many romantic discoveries on the sea bed, and divers engaged in salvage work have met with not a few startling adventures.

stances that provided quite enough excitement for the lew people engaged in the operation.

Two Liverpool divers were employed; and, one complaining of thirst, the other climbed the rocky islands to get some water from a spring. Happening to look seawards he observed a whole fleet of junks making for the island. Instantly he gave the warning, and by lowing until the breeze caught their dittle craft, the party just succeeded in escaping into Shanghai from a horde of pinates—about a hundred vessels in all.

Four-fifths of the bullion had been salved whole fleet.

IRISH PAPERS SNEER AT HOME RULE BILL

Dublin, April 1 .- The Irish Times, commenting editorially on the Irish home rule bill, says that even should it become law there would remain a forcement. It declares:

"Two points will become more ob vious as the bill moves toward the statute book-it surrenders threefourths of Ireland to the forces of anarchy and plants a cancer in every heart in the empire. The Freeman's Journal says: "The bill can have no other effect than to make confusion more confounded. The Irish Independent says: "The was framed on the assumption that the Irish people are idiots and that any abominable system of governient is good enough for them."

COW'S DENTIST.

An Australian townman living at Keswick, reported to the authorities that some miscreant had pulled nearly all the teeth of the family cow, and an instrument had been found in the fleid A policeman and a veterinary surgeon examined the cow, and it was discovered to be suffering from con stipation. There was apparently nothing the matter with its mouth, and the explanation of the trouble was that its owner was not aware that a cow has no front top teeth. The instrument picked up belonged to a blacksmith, and had fallen thru his fence into the paddock

Diving Under a Cathedral.

One of the most extraordinary operations in which a diver ever has been engaged was the "saiving" of Winchester Cathedral. The original foundations, resting on a layer of clay, below which was a layer of peat, began to give way, and the cathedral was in danger of collarsing. After a good deal of discussion it was decided to undermine the walls in small sections, digging clear down to the solid gravel-on-chalk stratum that was below the peat. This entailed working under water, and a diver was employed. Laboring in total darkness, he established a bed of concrete, from which masonry was built up to the old foundations that were laid nearly a thousand years before.

Nation.

Paris.-Former Premier Clemen eau's pithy advice to the French on his last speaking tour: "Pay taxes and have children," has followed by a crystallizing of sentiment for prompt remedies to the gradually decreasing birth rate. "How to save France" and like phrases are being used in a vigorous campaign by the National alliance, organized to fight birth control and to encourage the increase of population by making it an honor to have tion by making it an honor to have large families and by giving bonuses for all children after the second.

Pictures are being used by the Alliance comparing France and Germany, showing how France's almost stationary population in past decades and its present decreases threaten the nation and, it is added, "France is lost; nothing can save a nation that commits suicide," unless present conditions are remedied. Illustrations are given to show that it is possible for a race to die out or become so for a race to die out or become so weak as to be enguifed in a sudden influx of foreigners. Other pictures contrast the indulgent attitude toward irregular life with the approbri-um that, it is urged, should attach to

GHOSTS AT HAMPTON COURT.

Hampton Court, Cardinal Wolsey's famous palace, situated a few mi west of London, and overlooking Father Thames, is now reported to be the rendezvous of "veiled spectres." They were "heard" many nights during the Titanic struggle of the British in the recent war. It is averred that the cardinal has reappeared condemning, in strident language, the gross materialism of the age. Nell Gwyn. the "jade with the saucy tongue," has been "seen" to ascend and descend the royal steps in light and frivolous deportment. But the most afrighting vision of all is that of a white-robed figure running down a corridor, with her long hair streaming behind her, and disappearing into the chapel. This startling apparition is said to be that of the unhappy Catherine Howard, the second queen whom Henry VIII. sent to the executioner's block; and who repeats the incident when she rushed into the chapel to beg for her life from her tyrannous lord, who was life from her tyrannous lord, who was
