HER FATHER
LCST AT SEA

Young Girl Orphaned on Voyage From England to United States

New York, July 16.—Officers of a passenger liner which has arrived in this country from a British port report that one of the first cabin passengers, Charles A. Williams, an American mining engineer from Johannesburg, South Africa, disappeared from the ship during the trip and left his 15-year-old daughter Helen alone on board. Passengers who had talked with Mr. Williams on the voyage said that the daughter had been born in South Africa and sent to England to be educated by her father after Mrs. Williams died. He told the women passengers that he was bringing his daughter to America to see some of her relations and get away from the war atmosphere in Europe.

On the only rough day of the voyage the ship rolled and pitched heavily. Mr. Williams occupied his seat at table at dinner that night and seemed to be in the best of spirits. He said he would walk the deck while a concert was being held in the dining saloon. While the chairman was making his speech, about 8.30, for a collection in aid of the Seamen's Widows' and Orphans' Fund, the liner gave a terrific lurch to starboard, which threw him from his feet and even took the cloth and papers off the table in front of him. Miss Williams attended the concert with Miss N. L. Cowley, one of Lord Northcliffe's secretaries, who was a passenger with Miss Williams and Miss Gil- low, two other members of his staff, and did not miss her father until after 10 o'clock, when she wanted to bid him good-night. After a steward had searched the deck, smoking room, and saloons without finding Mr. Williams, he reported this to the purser, who notified the commander.

A thorough search was then made of all parts of the liner without finding any trace of the missing passenger or any one who had seen him on deck after dinner. It was possible that he might have been on the top deck and gone over the side accidentally at the time the liner gave the big lurch. He was wealthy and had not complained of any trouble to any one on board.

The daughter, left all alone, was stunned when she was told the next morning that her father could not be found. When questioned by immigration inspectors, Miss Williams said that she had an uncle somewhere in America, who had sent her birthday presents when she was a little girl in South Africa, but she did not know his name. Miss Cowley took charge of the young girl, and she is now in a boarding house frequented by English travelers in Madison Avenue, near Thirty-fifth street, to remain until her relatives have been heard from. The agents of the steamship line have sent to New Haven, Conn., her father's native city, to see if the uncle lives there, and have also cabled to England, where he had friends.

ANOTHER GOOD
OPERA HOUSE BILL

High Class Vaudeville Acts Appeal to Large Audiences

The performance at the Opera House this week consists of that high class of vaudeville which has proven so popular in this city. It is varied, catchy, novel and on the whole highly entertaining. The hundreds of patrons who crowded in front of the entrance on Saturday evening waiting for an opportunity to see the change of programme told more eloquently than words how eager they were to see the various acts. The first on the programme was that of the McCarvers. The male member proved to be a blackfaced comedian of ability, and his companion an attractive and clever young lady. The act is brimful of fun, action, singing and dancing and made a hit with the audience, and proved to be a good choice for a certain raiser.

Dorman and Jennings were heard in an interesting, though rather odd, offering. The male member of the cast made quite a hit with his accent. One of their songs, which was entitled "You're Spoofing Me," was good.

A whistling and singing act by Hall and Wellington proved novel and entertaining. It is hard to believe that a person can give such a clever imitation of a bird unless one hears it. The singing was also good and both members were warmly applauded.

Jennie Kelly, in an Irish character, made quite a hit. He told many amusing stories, sang a few comic songs and gave recitations which were well received. One of his songs, "A Subway in Ireland," made a decided hit and he received hearty and prolonged applause. Jeanette LaFarlon & Company gave a novel performance of magical feats which were highly entertaining. The floating ball caused a mild sensation and many were the conjectures as to how the feat is performed. This week's episode of Gloria's Romance was pleasing and those who are following the serial found it very captivating.

LORD ROBERTS AND
GLASSES FOR THE ARMY

London, Eng., June, 1917.

To the Editor of The Times:
Sir,—As I have received frequent enquiries from Canada regarding our collection of fieldglasses, I venture to ask you for space to give the information desired.

At the beginning of the war, my father, Lord Roberts, asked the public to lend their field glasses and telescopes to the army. The answer from all over the empire was most gratifying to him, and I think it may be claimed that the glasses have been of the greatest service to our armies on every front. Since his death the work has been carried on by me on the lines laid down by him, and we have been able to allocate in all, nearly 30,000 instruments. I should explain that every glass is engraved with a registered number corresponding to an entry in our archives here, in order to facilitate its return, should circumstances permit, at the end of the war. Before being issued the glasses are classified by experts, and allocated, according to their special character, to different ranks and units. It has been a pleasure to me to issue lately more than 100 glasses, individually, to Canadian officers on their way to France. Owing to the recent developments on the western front, the need for glasses is now very insistent, and I should be most grateful for any more that can be shared. I will of course gladly acknowledge any sent. Yours truly,

ROBERTS.

Alkali in Shampoos
Bad for the Hair

If you want to keep your hair looking its best, be careful what you wash it with. Don't use prepared shampoos or anything else, that contains too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and ruins it.

The best thing for steady use is just ordinary mulled coconut oil (which is pure and greaseless), and is better than anything else you can use. One or two teaspoonfuls will cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, which rinses out easily, removing every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves the scalp soft, and the hair fine and silky, bright, lustrous, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get mulled coconut oil at any pharmacy, it's very cheap, and a few ounces will supply every member of the family for months.

PRESERVES WITHOUT SUGAR

Can. Gov't St's. Dillard, July 18, 1917.

To the Editor of the Times-Star:
Sir,—I hope you will pardon me, if I ask you to publish an account of an experiment I have tried and found successful. Two years ago I thought it might be possible to keep berries without sugar by cooking them in straight jars, which would be the same as canning them.

I tried sixteen bottles of blueberries the first year. When I opened them in the winter they proved superior to the canned berries, being brighter in color, and without the taste of the tin, so

CONSCRIPTION

St. John, N.B., July 18.
To the Editor of The Times:
Sir,—The members of Havelock L. O. I., having followed the course of events during the present war, and having noted the loyal response to the voluntary call to arms at that time and the recent debate at Ottawa on the presentation of the conscription bill, wish to heartily congratulate the members of parliament, both Liberal and Conservative, who cast politics to the wind and voted like men, for the passage of the bill. Yours very respectfully,
WILFRED T. WALDRON, Recording Secretary.
