BATTLE OF SOMME PICTURES ARE AN

The exploits of the moving picture man have been a popular subject of fact and fiction stories of recent years. These adventurous artists have been riving their necks and their chances of comfortable old age in the cause of "art." They were making "realism" for fiction pictures, "photoplays," "silent draznas," and those who would win laurels as so forth, intended merely to thrill and samuse. Now comes a different motive, and a different subject. The most daredevil "stunts" of the photoplays have been eclipsed. An actual battle has been filmed from the actual front amid the bursting shells, flying bullets, and amid the dead and dying, amid the inferno of noise and fury. Here, standing in the midst of the actual fighting, exposed to the same risks, side by side with the riflemen and the machine guns in the front line trenches, with the same possibility of being struck by shrapnel or buried by a shell, moving camera operators steadily turned their cranks of recorded it all imperishably on film. Well may the staid rarely moved journals of Great Britain, papers like the London Times and the Glasgow Citizen give way to enthusiasm. Nothing like the unreserved praise universally accorded to the film of "The Battle of the Somme" by the British press has ever been printed in regard to a moving picture." REID, OPERA HOUSE TONIGHT: REAL OIL GUSHER IN ACTION

The Opera House programme for tonight, tomorrow and Saturday offers Cleo Ridgley and Wallace Reid in the Lasky-Paramount photo drama, The House of the Golden Windows, a new Christie comedy, "His Wedding Day," depicting the laughable adventures of a man who selected Friday, the thirteenth, as the day for embarking on the sea of matrimonial bliss, and the 7th chapter of the thrilling serial drama, Liberty, the latter affording Eddie Poloinnumerable chances for stunt work. Usual performances afternoon and crening and the same little prices.

When you see Cleo Ridgley and Wallace Reid in the production of "The House of the Golden Windows," you will be given an opportunity to see probably for the first time an oil gusher well in action.

house of the Golden windows, 'you will be given an opportunity to see probably for the first time an oil gusher well in action.

To secure this gusher was one of the most difficult and unusual tasks the Lasky Company has had to perform. There are many oil wells in the vicinity of the studio, but they are all more or less pump wells—that is, the natural flow of oil has ceased and the liquid has to be brought to the surface by means of powerful pumps.

In order to discover a well that would spout oil high in the air, many difficulties were encountered. The entire oil district was 'surveyed looking for a well of this kind, but without success. Finally George Melford, the director, learned of a well that had been a gusher but which was then abandoned. It had, however, a slight flow of natural gas. Oil experts assured Mr. Melford that there was a large supply of natural gas. Oil experts assured Mr. Melford that there was a large supply of natural gas in the vicinity and that anynew oil well might gush. With a company of oil drillers and equipment, the Lasky Company leased a small plot of ground near the oild well and began to bore. After they got into the oil sand they did not know just what moment the oil would burst forth and two camera men, with their cameras, stood in readiness night and day to photograph the blow-up. The oil sands were finally reached and nothing happened. In desperation it was decided to "shoot" the well. Nearly 100 gallons of nitroglycerine were lowered and when everything was in readiness, Cleo Ridgley touched the plunger which caused the explosion.

Suddenly the whole ground seemed to suddenly the whole ground seemed to the burge derivick blow up in the wall. Waller—At Honeton.

Suddenly the whole ground seemed to open—the huge derrick blew up in the air and fell in a thousand pieces, and a column of oil shot fully 100 feet in the air. Every one in the Lasky Company was drenched with the greasy fluid, but the camera men cranked bravely away and before the well reverted to its normal flow, nearly 400 feet of film showing the spouting oil was secured.

"THE BLACK FEATHER" IS

What promises to be a gala event of the local theatrical season is the coming appearance, at the Opera House, of the celebrated comedian, Albert Brown, in a new play especially written for him by the Canadian dramatist, W. A. Tremayne, of Montreal, entitled "The Black Feather." It may be safely said that no comedian who has appeared in Canada for many seasons has achieved the wide popularity which Mr. Brown won in "The White Feather" last season. It was a success legitimately earnson. It was a success legitimately earn-ed, for the present-day stage boasts few

Great Britain, but the story is entirely different. The play is rich in exciting incidents, clean legitimate humor and emotional appeals and Mr. Brown promises a splendid supporting cast.

"THE CLIMBERS"

"The Climbers," the play that took the bigger cities by storm is the offer-ing of the Brunswick Chapter, I.O.D.E., assisted by a well-known local cast, at compatic. He declared it was the positive duty of those who stayed at home to see these pictures, so as to be able in adequate measure to honor the men who had gone to the front.

"See that this picture, which in itself is an epic of self-sacrifice and gallantry, reaches everyone," he wrote in a message delivered at the first formal presentation of the film in the Scala Theatre, London.

"If the exhibition of this picture all over the world does not end war, God help civilization. Mothers, wives, sisters and affianced ones, your hearts will hear, your voices speak in honor and glory of the living and the dead."
