Countess Who Backed Ex-Shah With Funds in Attempt to Recover Throne—Woman Chief of Scottish Clan

(Copyright, 1911, by the Brentwood company.)
Countess Henriette de Clermont-Tonnerre is the name of a mysterious French lady who was the principal financial backer of the ex-Shah of Persia in his recent attempt to recover his throne. She accompanied his party when it invaded Persia and was present, not only at the several encounters which took place with the government troops, but also at his final defeat. Nothing has been heard from her since then, and a good deal of alarm prevails among her relatives and friends in France concerning her fate, no one knowing whether she was killed, was taken prisoner, or escaped.

General Armand-Dowling, the commander-in-chief of the ex-Shah's defeated army, just before facing the file of government soldiers entrusted with his execution, had a long interview at Mirza-Jaffar, forty miles from Teheran, with the special correspondent of the London Times, who had known him well in Europe in happier days. In their conversation, the general, who was a graduate of the imperial Teresian military academy at Vienna, where so many royal personages have received their education, bore eloquent testimony to the role played by the Countess de Clermont-Tonnerre, in connection with the unsuccessful attempt of ex-Shah Mohammed Ali, to recover his throne from his small son at Teheran, who is still cruelly grieved over the absence of his father, and who, poor little fellow, would be only too glad to surrender his crown to his father.

The Countess Henriette de Clermont-Tonnerre is a very wealthy spinster of about forty-five years of age, who has devoted much of her leisure to travels in all sorts of remote portions and unknown corners of the Orient, where some of her adventures have been of the most exciting description. She is a member of the historic French house of Clermont-Tonnerre, and a cousin of its chief, the present and eighth duke of Clermont-Tonnerre. The founder of the family, Count Sibaud Clermont, of the Dauphine, distinguished himself in the twelfth century, in fighting for Pope Calixtus II, against the anti-pope, Maurice Bourdin, who assumed the title of Gregory VIII.

Sibaud de Clermont's descendants acquired the name and arms of the de Tonnerres through the marriage of Bernard de Clermont with Anne de Tonnerre, heiress of the last of the Counts de Tonnerre, in 1490. Among the most famous members of the house was the Marquis Gerard de Clermont-Tonnerre, who as field marshal, commanded the left wing of the French army at the battle of Fontenoy. Francois de Clermont-Tonnerre, Bishop of Noyon, was elected member of the academy in 1694, and founded the prize for poetry which the academy still gives each year.

Sibaud de Clermont-Tonnerre presided over the French National Assembly in the last days of the monarchy, at the close of the eighteenth century, and was killed in the massacre of the Tuilleries on that anniversary, August 10, 1792. The present Duke of Clermont-Tonnerre dates from the middle of the eighteenth century, when that first created in 1772 and which had become extinct, was revived.

The present Duke of Clermont-Tonnerre is one of the best known figures on the French turf, and is particularly interested in the game of roulette. He married the daughter of the Duc de Gramont, by the first of the latter's three wives, Isabelle de Beauvau-Craon. The Duc de Gramont's second wife was Marguerite Rothschild, and his present consort is one of the

The Evening Chit-Chat

By RUTH CAMERON

ONCE saw a man kick a dog. He was a transfer and he had been rebuked by a policeman for careless driving. He did not dare talk back to the policeman, but when the officer went away he turned around and kicked his little dog in the stomach.

When I saw the look in that little yellow dog's eyes I decided that whereas the lowest existing inferno might do for a man who brutally kicked a dog after some provocation from the animal, there would have to be a lower inferno created for the man who, like this one, vented his irritation against others upon an innocent dumb brute.

And yet I have been thinking lately how many of us sometimes display the same spirit which, in a more brutal form, animated the leecher.

For instance, a business man comes home from an annoying afternoon at the office. He is smarting, perhaps, under a rebuke from a superior to whom he did not dare to talk back. He is full of unvented irritation and when his wife says or does some little thing which does not like the dim bursts in all the irritation pours upon her head. Quite frequently this happens without any provocation, even the slightest, on her part.

Now isn't this just dog-kicking in another form?

Again the son of a daughter of the house comes home from school or college brooding over some disappointment. Some prize unknown, some school honor unattained, has temporarily embittered their young lives, and although the little mother, who has been looking forward to the home-coming with some such pleasure as possible, remains sullen and finds fault with everything. And the poor little mother, like the little yellow dog, turns away sick at heart and brained in spirit by the son's just dog-kicking in another form?

Or perhaps the mistress of the house, irritated by the dressmaker's mistakes, or tired out after an afternoon's shopping, disappointed to receive some letter from her mother, or perhaps the prior irritation upon the head of the luckless maid who chafes that night to burn the steak.

Isn't that just dog-kicking in another form?

But have we any right to?

Surely not if we indulge in any of these or the hundreds of other means of dog-kicking.

It wouldn't be consistent.

Rupolis of Rome. The Duc de Clermont-Tonnerre has two little girls, but no son, and the next heir to his dukedom is his cousin, Count Charles de Clermont-Tonnerre, commanding the 4th Regiment of the late King at St. Nazaire, and brother of the Countess Henriette de Clermont-Tonnerre, who has been the "angel" of the ex-shah of Persia's recent unsuccessful attempt to regain his crown.

Woman Head of Scottish Clan
Scotland's ancient and important Clan of Menzies, at a meeting held the other day at St. John, Alberta, in Perthshire, elected a woman, Miss Egedia Menzies, as its chieftain in the place of her brother, the late Sir Neil Menzies, who died last winter in Paris without issue. His baronetcy, created by Charles II, soon after his accession, has become extinct. The choice of a woman to an office of this kind is, I believe, without precedent, at any rate in modern times, and therefore noteworthy and calculated to interest Scotchmen and people of Scotch descent in all parts of the world.

When Sir Neil died, he left all his property to his widow, the divorced Countess of Saxe; but by virtue of an arrangement between herself and her sister-in-law, Castle Menzies, a quaint and imposing structure on the banks of the Tay, dating from the sixteenth century and occupying the site of the foundation of a castle built early in the twelfth century, has passed into the possession of Miss Egedia.

The name of a rugged crag just behind the castle, as also of the village depending thereon, has been in the possession of the Menzies for 800 years, without interruption, and the earliest of the Menzies—one of them, Sir Robert Menzies, was Lord Chamberlain of Scotland in the reign of Alexander III, on the occasion of the latter's coronation at Stonehaven in 1249, and was known as Sir Robert Menzies of Weem. In consequence of the destruction of Menzies Castle, and of all the other castles and manors, by Sir Robert Menzies, from whom the new chieftainess of the clan is lineally descended, in 1487 from the crown, a fresh charter of castle and lands, which is now in the possession of Miss Egedia, was granted to her by the Scottish crown, the first ever seen in the northern kingdom, having been brought thither in the form of small saplings from the Tyrol, by Menzies of Ouldrean in 1738. Of the seven saplings in question, two are still in existence in the grounds at Dunkeld belonging to the Duke of Athole and are the most gigantic specimens in the kingdom today.

The hunting tartan of the clan is red and green, not a very pleasing combination, and the dress tartan is a gorgeous check pattern of red and white, so startling as to take away one's breath when it is worn as Miss Egedia ventures to wear it, in an unbroken garb, from head to foot.

There are several branches of the Menzies family, and one of them, Frederick W. Menzies, a subaltern of the 2nd Life Guards, married last year, in London, Miss Hetty Davenport, daughter of the late John Davenport, of New York, and grand-nephew of Governor Morris.

The Serbian Tragedy
Asta Novakovich, the leader of the conspiracy against the late King Alexander and Queen Draga of Serbia, to whose restoration I have more than once called attention in these letters recently, has at length had bare the agreement which he and Colonel Maschin and their fellow jobbers made with King Peter. This agreement is in the form of a document in the handwriting of King Peter, bearing his signature, and dated Geneva, May, 1903. In it, Peter undertakes to rule Serbia in accordance with the terms of the constitution, to refrain from persecuting or prosecuting the conspirators, and to pardon and rehabilitate them, in the event of their being punished, against his wishes by the courts of law.

If the conspiracy should succeed, he was to pay all its cost out of his civil list. But if it resulted in failure, he was not to be saddled with any of the expense. This agreement was written and signed by Peter, on the occasion of his final interview with the conspirators.

MORNING LOCALS
In the police court yesterday afternoon Sarah Moran, on vagrancy charge, and Lucy Barrett, as inmate of a house of ill-repute, were sentenced to six months in jail. William Hanley, 88 or two months in jail on the charge of drunkenness, and William Harritt 88 or forty days on the same charge. Arnold Reid, charged with stealing a month organ and 25 cents was sentenced to six months in jail, and Walter Axel, charged with vagrancy was fined $3 or three months in jail. Edward Ring, charged with assaulting James Haney, was allowed to go.

The divided water service, ordered some time ago by the common council, has been put into operation and is said to be satisfactory. The pressure was tested yesterday and the results will be compared with the tests made before the system was introduced.

Rev. H. H. Ferguson, pastor of the Free Baptist church, on vagrancy charge, has resigned. Mr. Ferguson will rest for a time.

Montreal despatch says that Hon. J. J. Tweedie, lieutenant-governor of N. B. Brunswick, who will retire on March 6, 1912, will in all probability resume his law practice in New Brunswick, and that there is also a chance of his re-entering political life.

The thirty-fifth anniversary of the Church of England Institute was celebrated yesterday with special services in Trinity Church last evening. In a sermon delivered by Rev. D. Conyers, he advised his hearers against reading newspapers which print vivid descriptions of murders and other sensational matter.

A $5 bill sent anonymously to Ungar's Laundry with the message "To be used for the Firm" is regarded by Manager Munn as evidence of restitution on the part of some one who had defrauded the firm of that amount.

Mrs. Bonnie Parlee died at the home of her son, Arthur S. Parlee, 84 Germain street, yesterday. She was in the eighty-second year of her age and is survived by one son. The body will be taken to Apolonia, her birth place, for interment.

Rev. J. D. Wetmore, the new pastor of the Tabernacle Baptist church, was welcomed last evening by the church members against reading newspapers which print vivid descriptions of murders and other sensational matter.

NEVER DISAPPOINTS

The sale of Parison's Hair Tonic has been tremendous because it never disappoints. Mrs. Jas. Harris, of Wapella, Sask., says: "I found Parison's Hair Tonic to be the best scalp tonic I have ever used. My hair had been coming out in clumps and was very dry and brittle and the scalp was always itching and full of dandruff. I have used two bottles of Parison's Hair Tonic and my hair has stopped falling, the itching and dandruff have disappeared and my hair is fine and soft and glossy. I would not be without this fine Hair Tonic for many times the price."

Parison's Hair Tonic is a short time. Women of refinement the country over are using it and it never disappoints.

Sold by leading druggists everywhere for 25c and every bottle guaranteed. The girl with the Auburn Hair is on each package. Mail orders filled, charges prepaid, by the Grooms Mfg. Co., Fort Erie, Ont. Also sold and guaranteed in Fairville by Allen's Fairville Drug Co.
