MAN EATING TIGERS SLEW 67 PEOPLE

Awful Mortality in India Caused By Wild Animals—Snake Bites Alone Killed 22,478—Some 93,000 Cattle Victims

Calcutta, Sept. 18—According to a statement published by the government of India the total number of persons killed by wild animals in 1910 was 2,400, compared with 2,406 in 1909. Man-eating tigers were more aggressive in the Sundarban portion of the Khasia district, and this is attributed to the diminution of their natural food supply, owing to the drowning of large numbers of deer in the storm wave which accompanied the cyclone of 1909.

In the central provinces and Berar, tigers destroyed sixty-seven victims, as compared with 102 in the preceding year. Six known man-eating tigers and two panthers were killed during the year in these provinces. The abnormal number of deaths due to wild pig in 1909 in eastern Bengal and Assam—126—was not maintained, though fifty persons were victims to these animals.

The total mortality among human beings caused by snake-bites rose from 21,984 to 22,478. An increase in eastern Bengal and Assam is attributed to snakes being driven by high floods to take refuge in the raised village sites. Both in this province and in the United Provinces a considerable number of cases were treated with the Brinton lancet and permanganate of potash, and a high proportion of them are reported to have recovered. No reliable deduction can, however, be drawn from the use of this lancet, owing to the lack of proof that the bites it was used upon were really those of poisonous snakes.

The number of cattle killed by wild animals was 93,074, against 94,207 in 1909. Rewards are paid for destruction of wild animals and snakes. In 1910, 1,421 tigers, 5,029 leopards, 2,292 bears, 3,114 wolves and 91,104 snakes were killed.

MURDERER SLAYS FIVE AND HIMSELF

Appalling Tragedy in Hessian Village—Awful Revenge of a Young Man Because Fault Was Found With Him

Rein, Sept. 18—An appalling tragedy almost without a parallel in the history of crime, is reported from the Hessian village of Rendel. Wilhelm Gunderloch, a young peasant of dissolute habits, after squandering the sum of $25,000, which had been hoarded up by his father, sold his farm about a year and a half ago for $11,300, and, abandoning his wife and children, made off to London with the money. Before leaving he threatened to return some day and murder every one of his relations because they found fault with him. Some time before that he had already shot his brother dead, but had been acquitted on the ground that he had acted in self-defence.

On his departure his wife went to live in the house of her parents, whose name was Eberhard. They had also with them another daughter and her husband, Wissembach by name. A little before 6 o'clock in the morning Gunderloch arrived at Rendel in a motor car, which he left outside the village, so as to avoid attracting attention, and stealthily made his way into the courtyard of his father-in-law's farm, where he hid himself. Punctually at 5 o'clock, according to his wife, old Eberhard entered the yard to feed the hens. He was confronted by Gunderloch, who shot him dead with a couple of bullets from his double-barrelled rifle.

The murderer then rushed into the house. There he met his mother-in-law who was coming down stairs. Without speaking a word he raised his weapon and fired. The old woman was struck in the body and fell dead on the stairs, where her corpse was found in a sitting posture. Gunderloch then went up stairs, and entered the bedroom occupied by Frau Wissembach. The woman, clad in a night dress, was standing at the open window, screaming for help. Another double shot from the rifle killed her instantly.

Meanwhile her husband, who had been in bed in the neighboring room, had sought safety in flight. Gunderloch pursued him downstairs, reloading as he went, and reached the door in time to lay the fugitive low with another fatal couple of bullets.

Of the adults in the house only the murderer's own wife now remained alive. The wretched woman had in her terror sought out a window that opened on to the roof of the neighboring house, and from this she had frantically torn a score of tiles in the hope of escaping through the hole. But her blood-thirsty husband was too quick for her. He discharged both barrels into her body as she hung half out of the window. She, too, expired immediately.

Apparently Gunderloch made no attempt on the lives of his two little children, but after killing his wife quietly left the house with the rifle under his arm. The neighbors, alarmed by the shots and shouts for help, had gathered round the farm, but none dared approach the man who had just given such evidence of his marksmanship and his contempt for human life, and he disappeared unobserved among the gardens that surround the village. The pursuit of the desperado was taken up by police dogs, which found him lying dead in a potato field. He had finished his terrible deeds by firing a bullet into his own mouth. Gunderloch was only twenty-six years of age.

ARCHBISHOP'S PROTEST AGAINST THE BIG HATS

Milan, Sept. 18—The Archbishop of Genoa has addressed a letter to his clergy directing them to exhort the female members of their flock to abstain from wearing the enormous hats now in vogue. He points out that these monster hats prevent lumbering members of the congregation, who wear a simple mantilla on their heads, from getting a glimpse of the altar and of the officiating priest.
