> Among the passengers by the steamer Alaska from Cape Nome was Captain Wm. A. Bagg, an English gentleman who has made a long cruise in search of sport. Last June he chartered the 57 ton schooner Caleb Curtis at Hongkong. She was formerly a San Francisco pilot boat. From Hongkong the schooner se out for the Siberian coast by way of Japan. With Captain Bagg were four friends and two hired seamen, it was a pleasant cruise from Japan to the Czar's frontier domain, where the huntsmen bagged game such as bear, elk and deer, but neither moose mor cariboo, which were seen in abundance, to their hearts' content. Leaving Siberia, the party made for the northern Alaska coast in the fall of 1898, finally bringing up in Kotzebue Sound, where they passed the winter. It was here that the two sailors, both Americans, left the party. and one of the five owners met death by drowning.
