Assessors' Notice Town of Chatham,

Speaking of hymns, the Rev. Robert Collyer said the other day: "I well remember one day when this subject was the object of a discussion between Ralph Waldo Emerson and Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes. The latter said that many of the so called hymns were mere pieces of cabinet work. Then his voice deepened, his eves shone, as we remember him in his noblest moments, as he said, 'One 2vmn I think supreme.' Emerson threw his attention was arrested, and waited. Dr. Holmes repeated the first verse:

"Thou hidden love of God, whose height,
Whose depth, unfathomed, no man knows,
I see from far thy beautoous light.
Inly I sigh for thy repose.
My heart is pained, nor can it be
At rest till it finds rest in thee. "'I know—I know,' exclaimed Emerson. 'That is the supreme hymn.'" -New York Triburs.

In all matters of detail, in literary manner, in the use of words, in gram-mar, punctuation and typographical method he was the most careful and exacting of editors. One time an editorial contained two lines of poetry in type of

He took the blame whenever an error escaped his eye. "I take shame to myself," he wrote one time when the author of an editorial had confounded Boston brown bread with Graham bread, "for heaving spinted this without

SPAIN'S CROWN JEWELS.

Leopold's reason for refusing the crown was that the proposed boundaries of the country were insufficient, the exclusion of Crete especially influencing Joseph Benaparte.
"In 1817 Joseph Benaparte's secretary, Maillard, left Philadelphia armed with letters which represented him to be a traveling agent for Girard's com-mercial house and visiting Girard's cor-respondents in Holland and Switzer-land," William Parrine writes of "When the King of Spain Lived on the Banks of the Schwelkill" (in Philadel. Doing is the great thing, for if read ately people do what is right in time bey come to like doing it.—Ruskia PUMPING COAL.

The Modern Way of Taking Out the Cargo The old way of recovering coal from boat, with the coal in it, to a poin were worked, under the sunken boa from pontoons moored alongside of it.
At low tide the chains were made fast on the pontoons, which, rising with the tide, lifted the sunken boat clear of the bottom. At high water it was taken in-shore as far as possible, until it again grounded. This operation was repeated until the boat was brought to the surface. The new way, or, rather, the modern way, is to pump the coal up from the boat, wherever it may lie, and then raise the boat, if it does not raise itself. By this method the work is all done in very much less time and at very much less expense.

The pump used has no pump valves.

It is a centrifugal pump, the suction being produced by means of a disk, with wings attached, turning at high speed within the pump shell, a circular chamber, to which the suction pipe is attached. An eight inch pump of this kind will pump grate or broken coal easily, and pump up a load of 300 tons in a day. It will raise coal from a boat sunk at any depth from 5 feet to 200 feet. The pump and engine are installed on a wrecking boat, which is moored near the sunken boat. In this use the pump has a long flexible section of suction pipe attached to it, and to that are attached the various additional lengths of pipe that may be required to reach down to the coal. This pipe is the same size as that of the text, and, made of wrought iron, and it is made in sections of different lengths, so that it may be joined to make a pipe of any length desired. At each end of each any length desired. At each end of each length of iron pipe is a flanger. As lengths of pipe are joined, the flangers are bolted together, with a rubber gasket between, to make the joint tight. The flexible snotion pipe is held out over the water and over the sunkes boat from the wrecking boat by a gaff, and iron pipe is added to the needed depth. By means of the gaff the pipe may be raised and lowered as occasion may require, as, for instance, to raise the lewer and of the snotion pipe from one part of the canalboat up and over a creek-beam connecting the sides, to be lowered into the coal in another part of the boat.

TERMS-$1.00 a Year, in Advance pump is first charged with water, which is done in an exceedingly brief time, and in a very simple manner by means of a siphon attached to the shell of the pump. When it has been charged, the pump is started and the lower end of the suction pipe is then lowered into the coal, and coal and water are pumped un teasther and thrown out through the coal, and coal and water are pumped up together and thrown out through the pump's discharge pipe in a continuous stream. A bent to receive the coal is made fast alongside the wreaking boat, and the coal from the pump is discharged upen a screen set at an incline between the two boats. The water runs through the screen and the coal runs on into the other boat.

The suction nine can be handled for runs on into the other beet.

The suction pipe can be handled for the most part from the wreeking boat. If any handling under water is necessary, a diver goes down for that purpose, and it may be that the diver brings within the power of the pump's suction remnants of coal left in nocks and crannies which it might otherwise not have reached. When the boat has been supptied, if it is not too much damaged or water soaked or teo firmly bedded in the mud, it will float of itself. If suction holds it to the bottom, it will rise when it has been started clear.

Pumps of this kind are made of from 3 to 60 inches in diameter.—New York Sun.

The Two Lobes of the Brain. In the ordinary working of the brain one half is more active than the other and exercises a superiority on its neigh-bor lobe. This lobe—in ordinary per sons the left, of course—is the carebral master. Heredity, education, or what we will—all the combined influences, in short, which mold human life—have tended, by some process of physiological selection, to place one lobe over the other in point of importance. The other (right) lobe is the servant of the left in a measure. Its education has been neglected, and it requires the control of its better cultured neighbor in order that life may be conducted in a sensible and sane fashion. The most hopeless cases of insanity, Wigan would have held, would be those in which soth hemispheres were affected. If one was alone ailing, the ether might exert more or less control ever it, and the extent of the control would depend on in short, which mold human life-he tent of the control would depend on which lobe exhibited the diseased ac tion. All degrees of insanity or mental derangement could thus be accounted for on this supposition of the relative control of one hemisphere by the other. The perfect life is that in which the better and higher half controls the weaker and less responsible.—Andrew Wilson, M. D., in Harper's Magazine. A Welshman who was in London when extensive sewering operations were in progress lost his watch. He reported the matter to Scotland Yard, and the officials said they would leave no stone unturned to find the missing timekeeper. Shortly afterward Taffy again visited the metropolis and saw street after street turned up. He was told that in all 36 miles of road were in the same condition. He rushed down to Scotland Yard and exclaimed to the wondering
