We have to stop meeting like this!

Westwood high school students Jo Anne Van Raven and Murray Power found themselves pitted against each other and totally battered Saturday at Port Credit Memorial Park. They were part of a free-for-all that followed The Mississauga Times Tug-of-War events, part of the city's fifth birthday party, Fritterfest '79. In earlier action, the Peel Regional police team pulled the Mississauga firefighters into the pit of fritter batter (a mixture of Credit River water and Reid flour). The Times defeated The Mississauga News and Clarkson High School won the high school division. Fritterfest officials estimate 50,000 people enjoyed the fun Saturday, making the festival the most successful the city has seen. Story and more pictures on Page 3, 22.

In the news

Frank and Dianne Fallis built their own home on Tomken Road 23 years ago. Now the city and a developer are telling them they have to move to make room for a new road. They don't want to leave — Page 6.

Our readers say . . .

Mississauga city council wooing the Concorde to Toronto International Airport is preposterous . . . MP Don Blenkarn has a chance to inject some sanity into Canada's foreign policy . . . and the Queen Elizabeth Hwy. overpass at Applewood is NOT safe for school children — Page 11.

Women in hockey

Women have been playing hockey since 1892 but female hockey players are still considered by some to be figure skating school flunkies, Times writer Mary Ferguson reports — Page 33 . . . Also in The Times Sports/recreation section — One of the newest Streetsville Derbys has been called an ingrate by his old team's manager — Page 34 . . . The Peel high school football league was not caught unawares when the Canadian Amateur Football Association changed its rule pertaining to football shoes — Page 37 . . . Merle and Russ Biggart stay away from the rinks now that their two kids have grown up but they probably know more about the Mississauga Hockey League than anyone else in town. They are the league's scheduler and statistician — Page 35.

Columnists

Where are they now? Columnist Chris Zerkovich traces some of yesterday's movers and shakers, such as Frank Bean and Hazel McCallion — Page 3.
