THE WILL DEADT TIE. HOW BIG ANIMA'S ARE TRAPPED IN AFRICAN JUNGLES.

Hunter's Fearful Experience With a Pack of Hyenns-The Gortlin Said to Be the Flercent of All the Wild Creatures in Africa.

Since his boyhood Arthur Spencer, one of the bravest wild animal trappers in the world, has been battling with the terocious beasts and lives to tell the tale. Through stratagem he has always successfully overcome brute force, although he has passed through experiences which of themselves were enough to kill a man of ordinary nerve. "Yes, I am in an interesting profession, which is not generally understood by the people." said Mr. Spencer. "They crowd and jostle into the tents during the season to look at the wild animals, but they never realize what patience it requires and the hardships gone through to catch the beasts in their native lands and bring them to America.

"A wild animal catcher has to study the ways of living and the characteris-tics of the animals he is after. For instance, a monkey can never be captured unless you know how to go about it. A unless you know how to go about it. A man can't scramble through the tops of a tall tree and get within a hundred feet of a nimble monkey. The way we take them is to carry into the jungle a big gourd of fermented rice juice. When we reach a tree which is filled with chattering monkeys, we open the gourd and pretend to drink the liquid. We then retire to a safe distance, and the monkeys, ire to a safe distance, and the monkeys, in their imitative way, come down the tree and all freely drink of the liquor. A half hour later we can come back and pick the little fellows up as they lie about under the trees in a drunken stupor.

"A baboon is taken in a similar manner, but I have never known one to live through the trip to Europe or America.

They generally died on my hands before we got 100 miles away from the coast. They either died from seasickness or from the effects of a change in climate.

"I consider a gorilla the fiercest of African wild animal life. In efforts to get him we are compelled to pierce into the heart of jungles where in midday it is dusk. When we suddenly come upon the gorilla family, the mother sends her young one scampering up a tree, while she stays to defend him. The old man, standing on his rear legs, beats his chest and gives a roar louder and more terrible than that of the lion. He then comes at you like a flash of lightning. The only thing to do is to wait until he is about on you, then shoot him with an explosive shell. If your shot misses, it is all over

"We take all large animals in pits. If a man is careful, there is not much dan-ger. A deep pit is dug in the path of an elephant tank, which in this country is known as a deer lick. In the pit is placknown as a deer lick. In the pit is placed a heavy-net, the top of which is fastened with rubber. When a rope which is attached is pulled, it closes and forms a strong bag. The net is stretched and the pit covered with bamboo, earth and grasses. The rope which closes the pet is run a little to the windward of the pit is exceed six where the animal catcher to a second pit, where the animal catcher is hidden. When he sees the beast break through the covering of the pit, he pulls the rope, and the animal is securely held until help arrives and he can be lifted in-to his eage with the net still about him. The net is only pulled away after the lion or whatever animal he happens to be is securely locked in his cage. "The only danger to the cate the changing of the wind. After his pit has been dug and he has taken his place in it, often through the changing of the in it, often through the changing of the air currents through the jungles, the man is not on the windward side of the bir. pit. Then the beast scents him, and the chase turns to be a man hunt. The one safety of the animal catcher lies in his safety of the animal catcher lies in his using his rifle at the proper time. There is an odd and unearthly feeling in shooting a lion with a highly explosive shell such as we use. We watch the lion bounding toward us with his mouth open and his eyes like coals of fire. Suddenly the report of a gun echoes, and there is not lion in sight. The uitroglycerin in the bullet blows him to pieces, and there is not even enough hide left to cover the seat of a chair.

"I have had both my legs broken, my ribs caved in and my skull laid bare by attacks from wild beasts. The most trying circumstances occurre; when I was a boy in 1879. I was in Africa, and a party of 70 of us started out on a hunt. I was a boy and tired easier than the rest. I soon stopped beneath a tree, expecting to hurry and catch up with the party later. I fell asleep, however, and when I did awake it was late in the afternoon. I heard a harsh laugh and thought it was some of the party who had returned to find me. The laugh came to my ears, and, looking across a short veidt, I saw a pack of hyenas coming toward me. It was useless to shoot, for they were too many. It was also useless to climb a tree, for they would wait until I fell to the ground from exhaustion. I pretended to be dead. These byenas only eat decomposed bodies. Soon the animals were sniffing about my face and body. They pulled and mauled me, but ! lay perfect-ly still. Suddenly they seized me in their teeth and started across a rolling country and dragged me thus for miles, dropping me at the mouth of a cave from which came the awful odors of such dens. They nauled me about some more and finally dragged me into the cave, where I remained that night. The next day the pack again went out on a hunt, and I escaped a short distance, only to fall exhausted and suffering intense agony. A passing caravan picked me up and car-ried me to a small town, where I soon re-

The son, succeeding the father as editor and proprietor of The Times, is now, chosen to occupy the same post.

DIPHTHERIA NEXT DOOR

Perhaps this dreadful disease is in your neighborhood, even at the very next door. Then danger is near your home certainly, and terrible danger, too. Did you know you could destroy the germs that cause this disease? You can, and it's best done with our Vapo-Cresolene. Put some Cresolene in the vaporizer, light the lamp beneath, then let the vapor pass off into the sleeping room, Have the children sleep in the room and breathe-in this medicated air. You see this vapor destroys the germs that may have lodged in the children's throats. We know this from the record of cases and bacteriological tests. It is an easy way to prevent all contagious diseases that may be about.

The following article was taken from The London (England) Morning Post, Thursday, January 31st, 1895: To the Editor of "The Morning Post."

Sir.—About two years ago an accident revealed to me a disinfectant that has an extraordinary controlling power over diphtheria—Cresclene. I know neither its origin nor composition, but I know it has cured many cases of diphtheria I have seen since. It is absolutely safe, does not interfere with other treatment, and is easy of application.

A tent is to be built round the bed with sheets, the vaporizer inside it, the lamp lighted, and the receiver over the lamp kept constantly half full of Cresclene, so that the patient shall be in the vapor of Cresclene day and night. This will give complete relief in less than 24 hours. I shall now briefly relate the particulars of the last case I had under my care. A boy about four years of age was put to bed apparently quite well. Next morning he was found dull and heavy, was roused with difficulty, and refused all food and drink. When I saw him at a p.m. he lay in the same dull state, his neck swollen on both sides as if with mumps, his upper lip double its size, and his face a livid purple color. He never roused up to notice anything until I took him out of bed and forced open his mouth to see his throat; the right side showed a large patch of diphtheria membrane. I never expected the child could live, but ordered one drop of tincture of steel in water every bour, and Cresolene to be used freely. At one o'clock, or in about eight hours, the child asked for a drink; at nine the next morning he wanted to get up; and at 10 a.m. I found him convalescent. Of course I give patechnical details in your paper. I take the unusual course of publishing it in your journal because it will thus be brought directly before the public without loss of time, whereas in a medical paper it would probably receive uo notice unless I were to publish e detailed report of some hundred cases. It would take some five years to collect these, and all this time, cases would perish that might be saved. It is perfectly safe and does not interfere with any other treatme To the Editor of " The Morning Post."
