SALLY CAVANAGH.

The Unattended Graves.

A TALE OF TIPPERARY.

BY CHARLES J. KICKHAM.

CHAPTER XVII.—(CONTINUED).

'Make a load of him,' said Tim to the groom. They lifted Mr. Grimden to his saddle. The well-trained cob had remained quietly in the snow...

CHAPTER XVIII.

And what has a certain little friend of ours been doing all this time? Ever since the night the proud beauty's lips touched her cheek, Fanny O'Gorman has been heroically resolving never to think of Brian Purcell except as a friend—a dear, dear friend...

The bus stopped at the gate. Fanny felt her heart sinking in spite of her when she saw her father and Father O'Connell coming up the door, and nobody with them. Father Paul clasped her hand between his own two, and that wonderful smile of his immediately sent a pleasant glow all over her.

CHAPTER XIX.

It was a fine day in February. The little cottage, half hid in evergreens, was a pleasant sight to look at. Mrs. Hazlett sat on her heels in the garden, after setting a ridge or two of early potatoes, which Matt was trenching for her.

The walk in the field became almost a matter of course whenever Miss Evans called at the cottage. And as Mr. Purcell, was from home there was no harm in extending the walk as far as the house. On one occasion she accepted the housekeeper's invitation to look at the quiet old furniture in the parlor.

CHAPTER XX.

One day Miss Evans looked over the parlor hedge, and expressed great admiration of the young lady in the field outside. Mrs. Hazlett proposed a walk in the field, and, with a look of innocent enthusiasm, the young lady said: 'Oh, yes; by all means, it will be so pleasant.'

'Shorter' Pastry and 'Shorter' Bills. We are talking about a 'shortening' which will not cause indigestion...

Instead of lard. None but the purest, healthiest and cheapest ingredients go to make up Cottoline. Lard isn't healthy, and it's not always clean...
