taken no further notice of it, but as he suppressed the truth and drew on his imagination for what I presume he thought a very sensational item, I am compelled to ask for a little space to correct him. In the first place the rev. gentleman (I style him rev. as I am inform ed he unites the profession of preacher with the tending of his flocks) could not believe that an honest man would drive sheep at that hour of the night. No wonder a man of such unbelief can work no great work among his hearers. I drove a flock of sheep as far as Mr. Lacey's on the evening he mentions, and Mr. Lacey helped me into his yard with This was between seven and clock. I returned home next eight o'clock. I returned home next morning to find that my flock had made good their escape—having got the gate open during the night. I succeeded in collecting them by noon. I found none of them near Steven's habitation. Af ter three or four days Stevens came "sneaking," as he says, in at the back part of my farm hoping, as he thought, to find them secreted in some retired nook. Failing in this, he claimed two out of a flock running in a field by the public road, and had I known as much about him as I do now, I should not have bein here better. have let him have them, as I have had a second deputation from Mr. Steven's family wanting more sheep.
