Census statistics, like all statistics, are deceptive. One thing of importthe rate of increase in population has does not exist. Our population now grows by as many thousand in one year as it did in two o' increase now existing. It would probably be correct to say that twothirds of the whole increase has been made in the latter half of the tenbut to the success or non-success of year period, and it is certain that maintained, the population of Canada millions.

> Some unreasonable person has complained that the railways are charging co much for hauling Nova Scotia at ples to the west. The people having voted that Nova Scotia apples should not be sold in the United States and that United States apples should not be sold in the Canadian West, it is to be supposed that the people intend the railways to take advantage of the opportunity thus created for them. If the game is to be the middleman against the producer and consumer, why should not the railways play it as well as the manufacturer? And the cards having been stacked to give the middleman the best of the eleal, where the complaint if those particular middlemen who happen to interested in railways should rake in the tricks? High freight rates operate toward the producing and consuming classes precisely as high tariff rates. If the latter is a blessing how can the former be other?
