Balky Horse.

One of the scenes witnessed on Water street, at the foot of Cochrane Street, this morning, was the amusing spectacle of about twenty equine experts endeavouring to cajole a balky horse into going in the direction in which it was headed. Two police officers were interested spectators and three kinds of water, and this prowatched the futile efforts of the ex-

This year of 1920, being a leap year, everybody knows that we young ladies are entitled to certain privileges, the chief of which is the right to pop the question of marriage to any young gentleman who may captivate our hearts. This, however, is an act of such a daring nature that, of its rashness, and so as all of my on the matter none can be found We were created for God's glory, would permit a much more rapid who has the courage to perform the message in song tell. After the solo taken that which was God's and given would be safer than those used at the timidity would be overcome were the conventionalities of society more relaxed in leap year, so that instead of young men having always the advantage of selecting partners at rinks and dances, the privilege should be reversed and enforced to the full by those in charge of all such public entertainments. At the rinks, for instance, during leap year, all young men should be obliged to remain seated whilst the lady skaters would be going around choosing whom they may as partners for each band; and so in regard to dancing, all ladies should have the extensive privilege of selecting and asking those whom for the judgment day to be judged. both houses. Idaho is the thirtieth they desire to dance with. By changing the conventionalities thus, we, whom you dear men are pleased to call the fair sex, would gradually be led up to develop courage sufficient to put the crucial question as to our future fates, and thus the leap year privilege would then become a reality and not a farce as it is now. As write this in my boudoir, before the beautifully finished photo of a sweet young bank clerk, which photo he was pleased to present me with at Christmas, I can cite my own case in connection with scores of my female intimates, as enjoying the favor and companionship of handsome members of the sterner sex, yet we all are forced to see the days and weeks upon you, but hasten to render God his due, which is yourself, your body. token of marriage intentions, nothing to console us, in fact, of substantial importance, except an occasional pre sent of a box of chocolates a silk miles southeast of New York. The handkerchief or a nicely embellished photo. Our parents tell us that the young men of to-day are too slow to propose, and so it has occurred to me to agitate in such a manner as I have outlined in this letter, so that the privileges of selecting partners be given exclusively to us this year. I can count not less than fifty handsome, dear young men, employed in shops and mercantile offices and in banks, along Water St. to-day, who are earning, I am sure, money enough want to be stirred up to their manifert duties, and I believe they will go on in their careless disregard of the give us the exclusive privilege of se lecting partners for every item on the programmes, then give us a share of them at any rate. Then when "two minds with but a single thought, and two hearts that beat as one" are brought together by these means, and recognized by society, the woman is privileged to use her own sweet will still further, and you may be sure Mr. Editor that the necessary courage will come to us to look into the eyes of our sweethearts. exclaiming as may suit the respective names: "Dearest John, or dearest Harry, or dearest Eric, will you marry me!
