Capture of the Secunderabagh.

The Secunderabagh [Alexander Garden,], Lucknow, was the scene of one of the most stubborn and sanguinary contests during the relief of the Residency by Sir Colin Campbell, in Nov. 1857. The Secunderabagh was a large place, surrounded by a wall, loophooled in every direction, and having in its midst a strong edifice of stone, with grated windows, garrisoned by men, each individually certain of meeting an ignominious and well merited death, and all rendered madly desperate by their situation by fear, fanaticism, and bigotry. And Sir Colin did not use the language of exaggeration when he wrote; "There never was a bolder feat of arms than the storming of the Secunderabagh." The rebels finding escape impossible, fought with the courage of despair and the fury of religious hate. Our men dashed in as quickly as the narrow breach would permit, broke the barricades, and jumped down upon the windows in the walls. A din of hideous noises rent the air, the rattle of musketry, the curses and yells of sepoys, the fierce cry of the British soldiers: "Remember Cawnpore boys!" The next morning the bodies of more than two thousand sepoys dressed in their old uniforms, lay in heaps. The gateway, principal rooms, and aside chambers, were literally deluged with their blood. The weapons of our men, their hands, their faces, and the green tartans of the 93rd Highlanders were all dripping with blood ere three hours were over, during which no mercy was shown.

A Ten Foot Ice House.

A rough board enclosure ten feet square and eight feet high will hold sufficient ice to provide fifty pounds per day for 130 days after allowing for a reasonable amount of wastage. An important fact to be remembered is that the smaller the quantity of ice stored, the larger is the proportion of waste. The bottom of the enclosure should be covered with a foot of sawdust. The ice should be similarly covered. The drier the sawdust the better. If the soil beneath the enclosure is impervious clay, a layer of gravel under the sawdust is advisable.

If sawdust is not obtainable, planer mill shavings will serve. If neither is to be had, two feet of marsh hay or any wild hay will answer. The roughest kind of a shed that will resist the weather is all that is required.

An Historical Hurricane.

The hurricane of November 14, 1854, proved disastrous in its consequences to the Crimean expedition. Not only did it inflict much immediate hardship upon the besiegers of Savastapol, all of whose camps were levelled with the ground and dispersed with their contents far over the miry upland, but quantities of much needed food fuel and forage were spoiled, and twenty-one vessels in the harbour of Balaclava were dashed to pieces, eight others being disabled. All of them were full of stores urgently needed by the army, and among them was the "Prince," a fine steamer, containing everything that was most wanted—warlike stores of all kinds, surgical instruments, guernsey frocks, flannel, drawers, woolen stockings and socks, boots, shoes, watch-coats; in short all that the foresight of the government could devise for the equipment and comfort of the troops. All these went with her to the bottom of the sea; the principal ammunition ship, also, was cast away; and each of the others carried down with it a part of that upon which the army depended for its existence. Next day, the little harbour of Balaclava was full of floating timbers and trusses of hay, through which boats scarcely could make their way; and numbers of the drowned were washed about the bases of the cliffs outside. The French lost the finest vessel in their navy, the "Henri IV.," and the garrison in Sevastapol shared in no less degree the general misfortune, having many of the houses that sheltered them unroofed, as well as their naval magazines. But it was still more disastrous to the besiegers, who with that day entered upon a winter of calamity.

What She Thought.

It was the dear old lady's first ride in a taxi, and she watched with growing alarm the driver continually putting his hand outside the car as a signal to the following traffic. At last she became exasperated.

"Young man," she said, "you look after that car of yours, and watch where you are going. I'll tell you when it starts raining!"
