

Jeannie Sinclair, OR, THE LILY OF THE STRATH.

CHAPTER XXXVI.—JIM MURDOCHSON BAFFLED AT LAST—THE STRATH ONCE MORE—PREPARATIONS FOR THE WEDDING.

The only personage within the precincts of the church when the youths approached was the bellman, and he was at the moment in the belfry, ringing one of his merry peals.

It was a little gallery almost enshrouded in darkness, and was at a great height above the area of the church.

In moody, mournful silence, William Denman leaned his head on the ledge of the gallery, and waited the coming of the hour which was to see Jeannie Sinclair lost to him for ever.

Robert Douglas stood by his side waiting also in silence, but haunted all the while by the strange yet confident assurance of Wandering Ned that the marriage would not take place.

Precisely as the hour struck the roll of wheels was heard outside, and presently Sir Ferguson entered with his lawyer. The Baronet was dressed in a new suit, and looked fresh and healthy—not at all like a man for whose murder another had been executed.

Let us pass outside for a minute to note the progress of Jeannie with her company from the Holme to the church.

On the morning of Saturday last, Mr. Jas. McManus and Mr. Thos. Hane, of the 6th Concession, Minto, proceeded on a contemplated journey to Galt.

The progress from time to time noted by you in the making of the W. G. and Bruce Railway is hailed with general satisfaction here.

The members of the local Orange lodge of Minto passed through Harrison this Monday morning arrayed in full regalia, accompanied by many of their wives, sons and daughters.

A ewe, the property of Mr. John McLean, 5th concession, Minto, had two lambs in the month of January last, and one other about two weeks ago.

THE WEATHER AND THE CROPS.—The heavy storm on Sunday evening laid a good deal of gank grain, some of which, with the aid of the brick breeze which followed during the day, rose again, but in many places there will be a good deal of lodged grain this year.
