A Love Story.

So on the morrow he took me into her ladyship's garden, surrounded by a high wall, so that no curious eyes could intrude. A group of walnut grees was at one end, and at the other stood a grand old cedar. Under the cedar a table and chairs had been placed for her ladyship's convenience. There was a little stool, and on it lay a half-dismembered doll. Into this solemn, sweet sanctuary we entered with reverent hearts. Said Abel to me in a low voice:

This is my lady's favorite spot. You must keep the grass clear and the seats nice. I need not tell you, when she sits here, reading or thinking, to work as much as you can out of sight," There was no need to tell me that. "She comes here very often," he con-tinued. "Sometimes she leaves her books and her work behind her. I always take them to the house. Generally she sits linking. I wonder of what my last thinks? He showed me some fine carnations broken at the "This is Miss Baby's doing," he said. "You must not lose patience with her. My lady loves her so deally, and smiles when missie breaks off the flowers." Lose patience with Miriam's child!

Ah. well; he did not know!

Ah. well; he did not know!

"There are several things that want doing here," he continued. "You will find a week's full work, and then you must take an hour every day. Now I will show you the lawn flowers."

Then I saw Atherstone Hall in all its glory of white terraces, tall towiers, long windows, and superb gardens—a home of which a duke might have been proud. A long terrace that lay been proud. A long terrace that lay on the west of the house was allotted my care, together with the lawn which her ladyship's window over-looked. I understood all that Abel told me, although each sense was watching and waiting for traces of my darking. I said to myself that if I could bid my passionate heart lie still if I could trample under foot the desire for revenge, the intense love and longing, the heaven of her pres-ence might still be mine. I might never speak to her or hear her voice: but I should see her, and, to one who loves truly that means much. I lived now in alternate bliss and torture, always in the hope of seeing her, always with the deadly anguish of knowing that she belonged to Sir Alex. The first morning she came into the rarden brought me one of the greatest trials of my life. It was in August, and the great red roses were at their sweetest, the tall white lilies at their fairest, the carnations, mignonette, the purple heliotrope, the sweet peas, M in perfection. I was busy weeding a bed of geraniums, when I heard the oor opened that led from the lawn. I knew it was Miriam; no one else had a key A great calm came over me. It was as though an angel entered unawares. I heard the light footsteps, but I did not lock up. Minute after minute passed. I never turned my head, and yet, to the very core of my heart, I was conscious of her sweet presence. Then, after a time, I looked round. It was Miriam, never "my lady" to me, but always Miriam May Dacre. She was walking slowly be-tween the white lilies, and they were no fairer, no sweeter than she. She wore a long trailing dress of white muslin, with rich cream-colored ribkons and white lace. She had thrown a square of white lace over her head. As she passed by she bent down to inhale the fragrance, and I saw her kiss the leaves. She did not look happy; but she had grown more lovely. There was more refinement, more dignity, more queenly grace in Lady Glen than there had been in Miriam May Dacre. The geraniums had fallen from my hands. I could do nothing but follow her with my eyes. She went from the lilles to the shade of the cedar tree She sat down on one of the pretty lit-

Was she thinking of me, my lost dear love? Suddenly, through the sunlit air came the sound of the Glen bells. We had heard them and loved them a hundred times together. I saw her start and grow pale; I saw her dark eyes dilate and fill with tears: I saw her lips cuiver; and then she knelt down in the grass, and laying her golden head against the rugged seat, she wept as though her heart would break-pas-sionate, despairing tears, bitter, hope-less sobs. Oh, my darling, each sound was a sword in my heart. Yet I dared not speak to her or go near her while my senses were still my own. I went away; another moment, and I should have forgotten reason, prudence, loyalty and honor. I should have flown to her, and, classing her in my arms, have kissed the tears away. During the rest of that day I was like one mad, like one possessed. I could not forget the sweet face, with its look of intense sadness, and the raining tears.

If she leved and regretted me, had she married him?

CHAPTER XII. To my great delight, Lady Glen took a sudden caprice into her head over the garden. She would have the shape of the flower-beds changed. She wanted alterations and improvements that would take, I know, several weeks of hard work; and I was happy to know that I should be near her at least once each day.

Her habits did not vary much; the only difference was that some mornings she rose early and came into the sarden before breakfast. Then she walked up and down, her beautiful walked up and down, her beautiful walked up and down, her beautiful face turned always to Glen. Her restless footsteps, her clasped hands, the sweet, dreamy eyes, and the tender, sad smile, all told me that she was not happy. My darling, why had she forgotten me and married him? Then towards noon she brought her work and her books, and sat under the cedar tree until the bell rang for luncheon. tree until the bell rang for luncheon. I never came in her way, but my eyes followed her. When she was in the garden I worked behind the cedar tree out of her sight. Once-ah me, what out of her sight. Once—ah me, what mingled rapture and pain it was!—once in the evening she appeared again. I had a great heap of dead branches and flowers to take away. I had never seen her in evening dress, and the splendor of her beauty startled me; I had not known that women could look so fair. She was dressed for a dinner party, and she wore a rich trailing dress of white silk, half hidden with white lace. On her neck a diamond necklace gleamed; a diamond necklace gleamed; a diamond necklace gleamed; a diamond star shone in the mass of golden halr. She had thrown a lace wrapper over her dress, but I saw the white round arms bare to the lovely pearly shoulder; I saw the white neck, more lovely than that of the far-famed Venus over whom ancients and moderns have rayed. She never looked at me even when she spoke; if she had

I turned away to go in search of them. #### A LIVELY WINTER

For Manitoba-Sye-Elections To Ee Hotly Contested.

Winnipeg, Dec. 12.-The Liberals will wage a strong fight against the Macdonald forces in the elections for Dau-phin and Gimli this week. Both districts are very inaccessible at this season of the year, as the rivers are not thoroughly frozen over and travel is difficult, so that full returns may not reach the city before the following week. In five constituencies gained the Conservative majorities aggregate only 60, and recounts will be applied for. In the event of failure protests will be entered in several, as many evidences of corruption are coming to light. The defeat of Finlay Young, speaker of the late legislature, in Killarney, was largely due to the lavish expenditure of money. Official figures reduce the majority of Mr. Rogers, Conservative, in Manitou, to 26, and there is also a falling off in other Conservative majorities. The five bye-elections necessary for the election of a new cabinet will be contested by the Liberals. The securing of two of these elections would put the parties on equal terms in the new house. Manitobans will evidently have a very exciting winter of politics.

Colossal Painting Unveiled in a Chicago Church.

Chicago, Ill., Dec. 11.-Six fine paintings, one of them "Calvary," said to be the largest picture on canvas in this country, were unveiled at St. Bernard's Roman Catholic Church last evening. The paintings are by Fer-dinand Danton, a French artist, who spent three years on them.

"Calvary" is a representation of the crucifixion, and is 32 feet high and 40 feet long. More than a thousand figures are represented in the painting. But, of course, the principal ones are those of Christ and the two thieves on the crosses. It is one of the most complete paintings of its kind in ex-

Fat Stock and Dairy Association Elect Officers.

The Big Show Is Now in Full

Opening Meeting-Instructive Address Tendency to Fraudulent Practices Will Be Investigated-Success As-

Yesterday afternoon the Western Fair grounds, where the annual Prowincial Fat Stock, Dairy and Dressed Poultry Show is being held, was, without doubt, the busiest spot in the city. Everything was being placed in readiness so that the machinery of the whole show would start working this morning smoothly, and in perfect order. The secretary's office was the hub of the wheel of activity. Secretary Hodson and his courteous assistant, Mr. Alex. Westervelt, were busily en-gaged in bringing order out of the chaos consequent upon removal to their present quarters, and also in attending to the many eager applicants for advice upon matters of entries and tickets and space allotments. An office has been partitioned off the large room of the stockmen's pavillon, where the secretary or his coadjutor will be found ever ready to supply information either to the exhibitors or to the sight-seeing to the exhibitors or to the sight-seeing public. In the remainder of this hall arrangements have been perfected whereby all the milk will be separated. It is expected that ten gallons of cream will be made each day. This will be done by a Malotte separator, which will be run by a Northy gasoline engine. Bota these machines will be given as special prizes. Back of the pavilion, in the cattle sheds, every arrangement has been completed for the rangement has been completed for the successful accomplishment of the objects of the show. The comfort of the animals has been guaranteed by closing up all crevices, and by placing stoves in the building, to insure all needful warmth. Especial care has been taken where the animals exhibited in the dairy class are being shown.
All entries in this class were on the grounds yesterday at 2 o'clock. In the other classes a great many came in yesterday, and by 9 o'clock this morning all the cattle were on the grounds. THE SHORTHORNS.

What is most noticeable in the dairy class is the large number of Shorthorn cattle on exhibition. An opinion has prevailed that Shorthorn cattle were not milk-givers. In order to dispel this illusion, the Shorthorn Breeders' Assoclation has offered solid inducements to exhibit in this class, with the re-sult that there are this year three times as many Shorthorn cattle in the dairy class as there ever were in any previous show. In this class it will be noticed by many who have followed the show that old "Calamity Jane," thrice champion of the dairy department, is not being exhibited this year by ner owners. Messrs. A. & G. Rice, of

No Guernseys or Jerseys are being exhibited. The absence of the latter is doubtless due to the scandal at Toronto fair. Prizes in both classes are the same as in bygone years. A large number of the shee swine entries were in yesterday. The machinery hall has been fitted up to contain the special prizes and the dressed poultry. One part of it has been arranged as a lecture room, in which the addresses will be given. THE OFFICIAL COMMENCE-

MENT. Last night in the stockmen's pavilion on the fair grounds, the annual meeting of the Dominion Cattle Breeders' Association was held, the president, Mr. John I. Hobson, of Guelph, presiding. The meeting was large. All parts of the country were represented. On account of the late arrival of the secretary, it was unable to pursue the regular course of business, and prior to his arrival, Mr. J. S. Woodward, of Lockport, N. Y., was asked to begin his talk upon

"AN IDEAL DAIRY COW." After introductory remarks concerning the gradual evolution of the animal to its present state, the speaker devoted some time to a statement of the different characteristics of the two divisions of cattle, the beef cow and the dairy cow, and stated that it would be impossible for a dairy cow to become a model beef animal, and vice versa. He utilized illustrations, and quoted figures, to prove that the power of a dairy cow to eat, digest and assimilate food puts more milk into the milk-pail than that power in beef cattle puts fat upon their backs. In order to do its best, a cow must be able to eat, digest and assimilate food, and to do this it had to be of a highly nervous organization. He mentioned the following characteristic features by which a model dairy cow could be recognized: The hair should be thin and silky to the touch; the skin, thin and soft; secretions, abundant, oily and yellow; breadth between the eyes, in-dicating great brain power; large mouth, strong jaw, bright eyes, large lung capacity, hollow in the back; rump, showing great pelvic power, large ability to store food; thigh well out, giving capacity for udder, which should be close up to body; long tail; wedge-like shape of the body, so that when standing behind one could scarcely see her fore-shoulders; bones small; udder well shrunken after milk-ing; deep shoulder, and thigh-pit. These are all evidences of the open organization, which form the distinguishing characteristics of every model dairy PRESIDENT HOBSON. In a short address President Hobson deplored the fraudulent practices which had been discovered at Toronto fair, and lamented their growing tendency He asked that a committee be appointed to make an inquiry into such practices, and endeavor to stamp them out. He also recommended that in consideration of his long and valuable services the name of the secretary, Mr. F. W. field to be live stock commissioner in Ottawa, be put upon the roll of life members of the association.

DELEGATES AND OFFICERS. Upon motion of Mr. Richard Gibson, of Delaware, it was decided to allow each association to nominate their own expert judges for the fall fairs.

THIS COMPANY has acquired, as a going concern, the well-known business in Australasia of The Dun-lop Pneumatic Tyre Company (Australasia), Limited, together with its Good-will, including Trade Marks and Trade Name, Patent Rights, Leases, Plant and Furniture in Australasia; and an Agreement was entered into. securing to this Company the exclusive rights throughout Australasia for all Inventions and Patent Rights relating to Pneumatic Tyres that may hereafter belong to THE DUNLOP PNEUMATIC TYRE COMPANY, LIM-ITED, of England, and special facilities are also given to this Company in regard to the purchase of raw material for the manufacture of Tyres. The English Dunlop Company has agreed not to compete with this Company in Australasia, nor allow other manufacturers whom it controls, who are operating under their licenses, to do so, thereby securing to this Company the Exqusive sales of the celebrated DUNLOP CYCLE TYRES, and also of the DUNLOP CARRIAGE TYRES.

The Australasian business was formed by the world-famed DUNLOP PNEUMATIC TYRE COMPANY of England in the year 1893. The net profits for the last year have been greater than for any previous year, and amounted to $71.578.96.

The Head Office and Manufactory of the Australasian Company is situate in Melbourne, and the Company has Branch Depots (where a full supply of stock is kept) at Sydney, Adelaide, Brisbane, Perth and Christchurch

The business of the Dunlop Pneumatic Tyre Company (Australasia), Limited, was taken over by this Company as a going concern from the 1st day of August, 1899, and the Company has the benefit of all profits from that date. The accounts of the Australasian business were submitted to the well-known Accountant, Thomas Brent-NALL. Esq., F.I.A.V., of Melbourne, Victoria, who has given the following Certificate with respect to the sales and profits for the last two years, and also as to the sales for the present year up to July 1st, and it will be noticed therefrom that the business is worked practically on a cash basis. The Company commenced business free from debt, with a working capital of $170.000.

" 424 CHANCERY LANE. MELBOURNE, July 20th, 1899.

"Mossrs. Moule, HAMILTON AND KIDDLE, . Solicitors, Melbourne.

"Gentlemen,—As requested, I have examined the Accounts of the DUNLOP PNEUMATIC TYRE COMPANY (AUSTRAL-ASIA), LIMITED, for the Two Years ended January 31st, 1899, and beg to report as follows:

"The Saies for the year ended January 31st, 1898, amounted to $370,009.95, and for the year ended January 31st, 1899, to $447,106.05, being an average of $408,557.99 per annum.

"The Net Profit for the same periods was $58,280.38 and $71,578.96 respectively, being an average of $64,929.67 per annum, and equal to ever 15 per cent. per annum on the net sales. "The total Sales for the Six Months ended June 30th, 1899, have reached $237,756.63 as compared with $215,575.74 for the corresponding period of 1898. The business is, practically, worked on a cash basis, the bad debts for the two years under review representing less than three-fourths of one per cent. upon the turnover for the whole period. "The above figures speak for themselves as to the magnitude and soundness of the business of the Company.

"I am, Gentlemen, yours faithfully, THOS. BRENTNALL." N. B. - All figures in the original reports of the Accountant, and in the original Memorandum and Articles of Association of the Company are given in pounds, shillings and pence, but same are herein given in dollars and cents for the benefit of the

As appears from the Accountant's Certificate, the net profits for the year ending January 31st last were $71,578.96, and, as the preferential dividend on the 80,000 Cumulative Preference Shares amounts to only $27,253.35, THESE PROFITS WOULD ENABLE SUCH DIVIDEND TO BE PAID MORE THAN TWO AND A HALF TIMES OVER. In addition to this, it will be noticed from the Certificate that the sales of the Dunlop Tyres for the present year exceed the sales for the corresponding months of last year, and the Balance Sheets for the half-year ending July 31st, 1899, show the Net Profits exceeded those for the same period of 1893 by 33 per cent., making the Net Profits for the 12 months ending July 31st, $78,977.57.

The business position of the Dunlop Pneumatic Tyre Company in Australia is a particularly strong one, as the Company has never relied upon patent rights for its business and profits, but simply upon the superior quality of its productions and upon its extensively advertised TRADE MARKS.

It is intended to further extend the scope of the business in Australasia by introducing the DUNLOP PNEUMATIC CARRIAGE TYRES AND AUTOMOBILES, which are now so extensively used throughout Europe.

The whole of the capital stock of the Company, amounting to £170,000, has been subscribed for, paid-up in full, and allotted; the 25,000 Shares now being offered are a portion of the 30,000 7% Fixed Cumulative Preference Shares. The control of the Company is held in Canada. The Articles of Association of the Company and List of Shareholders, and the half-yearly Balance Sheets of the old Company for the past three years, can be inspected at our office.

Application will be made to have the Company's Shares listed on the Toronto and Montreal Stock Exchanges.

Applications for Shares Must Be Made in the form Accompanying, and sent with a Cheque for the amount payable on application.

In the event of non-acceptance of an application for Shares the money accompanying such application will be refunded in full to the applicant.

The Dividends are payable in March and September, so the purchasers of the present issue will receive a dividend of 31 per cent. for the half-year March 31st next.
