

DAILY PAGE FOR ADVERTISER WOMAN READERS

MEN, WOMEN AND MONEY

Every man and woman has his or her little pet extravagance (says an American writer). But there are usually a good many points in favor of woman's economy in the long run. She usually spends more money than she does.

Two causes particularly tend to prevent women from being extravagant. In the first place, both Nature and training give women the idea of taking care of things—a strong point leading to economy. In the second place, women are not usually well off in respect to the position which they are trying to uphold. Consequently they are obliged to think a good deal about spending what they do to the best advantage. This is true of the very rich as of the very poor.

There is hardly a woman in existence who is not constantly striving to reach a higher plane of social life. To this end she must study how to get the most out of every shilling she can command. To do this she must have good habits, and a greater amount of common sense.

Women are accustomed to a daily handling of matters of detail which teaches them the exact price of things; and even when induced to make some little unnecessary expenditure, they usually manage to get the most for their money.

Penny Wise.

On the other hand, some women are as the old English saying has it, "Penny wise and pound foolish." Witness this fact on a pouring wet day. A woman will gather her skirts about her and stand in the wet, entirely ruining a best dress, when a man will hail a cab, and reach his destination in half the time; but the very next night he will spoil our good opinion of him by staying in town when caused by an engagement, too late to go home and expending his earnings on a handsome dinner; when a woman in such circumstances would content herself with a cup of tea and a sandwich, and be several shillings ahead.

Habits of carefulness arise in women from the fact that for generations men have gone to the wars, and women have had to take care of the household. Of course, we are changing all this, but the fact, nevertheless, remains that woman's extravagance is yet in its infancy.

An Auction Sale.

Dear Miss Grey.—We want some funny articles for auctioning off at a party. Could you suggest any? The idea is to have them labelled some high-sounding name and the inside of the parcel to be a joke. If you could name ten or twelve it would be a big help.

ARBITUS.

Ans.—Here is a list that may help you a little.

1. A masterpiece — "Whistler" (a whistle).
2. Study of a head — (a cabbage).
3. Glove press — (a small fashion).
4. Souvenir from Ireland — (Irish potato).
5. Relic from Japan — (a wrecked Japanese parasol).
6. Patent skirt lifter — (chocolate mouse).
7. A pennyworth of comfort — (a clay pipe).
8. A woman's weapon — (hatpin).
9. A marble bust — (broken marble).
10. A reminder of a needy friend — (sponge).
11. Emblems of justice — (scales).
12. Tear extractor — (onion).
13. The nomenclator — (toy bath tub).
14. Educators in profanity — (hammer and collar button).
15. A pair of nippers — (two clothes pins).
16. Ode to a sitting hen — (china nest egg).
17. A perfect foot — (a foot rule).
18. Maid of Orleans — (stick of candy molasses).
19. An instrument of torture — (toy cornet or banjo).

RECIPES FOR NEVA.

Dear Miss Grey.—Please give me a recipe for oatmeal cookies, also spiced currants. I will be very grateful to see these in your column.

Oatmeal Cookies.—Beat one egg light, add a quarter cup each of sugar, milk and thin cream; then add half a cup of fine oatmeal, two cups of flour, two teaspoons baking powder, and one teaspoon salt, mixed and sifted. Toss on a floured board, roll, cut out, and bake in a moderate oven.

Spiced Currants.—Wash and drain the currants and remove them from

BLEACHING PINK HOSE.

Dear Miss Grey.—Since you are so patient with inquiries, I guess I will trouble you.

1. I have a pair of pink lace hose (cotton) that I would like to make white. Can you help me out?
2. Can you tell me if there is a sequel to the book "Christie's Christmas," written by Pansy. If so can you give me the title?

Hoping I have not bothered you too much and wishing you a very pleasant vacation, I am,

Ans.—1. Make a chloride solution of one tablespoon chloride of lime to a basin well filled with water; drain off the liquid and soak the stockings for half an hour; then put over the fire with a little soap shaved fine and enough water to cover well. Boil for an hour; rinse through two or three waters and then hang in the sun to bleach out.

2. Do any of our younger readers know if there is a sequel? I must confess ignorance on the subject.

Thanks for words of the song.

The Horoscope

SATURDAY, AUGUST 1, 1914.

Good influences dominate today, according to the reading of astrology, for both the sun and Uranus are in beneficent aspect.

There is a fortunate sign for railways and all connected with them. Journeys are likely to be attended with pleasant experiences. The outlook for business relating to freight is said to be most encouraging.

Inventors are subject to a helpful rule during this aspect, which is believed to increase originality and resourcefulness.

As Uranus is supposed to produce fondness for the society of persons of opposite sex, the government today is read as especially favorable for romance and love affairs. Summer resorts and week-end parties are said to be under influence tending to sudden infatuations.

Owing to the sway of Uranus the seeds declare that interest in all psychic subjects will be quickened and discoveries of great moment will be recorded, they declare.

This is a day that should bring success to those who make public announcements of big plans. Political declarations are said to be "in the air."

There is a prophecy that a leader of a political party will expose a national scandal within 60 days.

The rule is an auspicious one for seeking new positions or making requests for promotion in any line of employment.

The month of August is declared by astrologers to be an exceedingly evil time for the King of Spades.

Toward the end of the month trouble in Bengal is foreboded. The victory of India is warped of personal danger.

The elevation of Mars above the sun and other celestial bodies at the time of the new moon in Constellation is interpreted as a menace to the life or the power of the Sultan of Turkey.

Toward the end of the month there is a lucky omen for the year. There is an augury of change, which will be beneficial. The influences are particularly good for those born in 1856, '60, '64, '65, '68 or '84.

Children born on this day have the prognostication of happiness and success. Boys may meet with such opposition if they establish themselves independently in business or in a profession, but the omen is fortunate for places as employees. Girls may be inclined to marry too young.

A BIG COMPLIMENT.

Little Johnny—Mrs. Taffendown paid you a big compliment today.

Mother—Did she really? Well, there's no denying that woman has sense. What did she say?

Little Johnny—She said she didn't see you come to have such a little boy as I was.

Blueberry Muffins.—Sift 2 cups of flour with 2 even tablespoons of baking powder, a pinch of salt, and a tablespoon of sugar. Break 1 egg into cup, fill up cup with sweet milk. Add slowly to flour mixture, beating hard as the milk is added. When well mixed put in 1 large tablespoon melted lard or butter and 1 cup of blueberries, put in well-greased muffin-pans and bake quickly.

Baked Custard.—Beat 4 eggs very light with two-thirds cup of sugar. Add 1 quart of milk, pinch of salt and any desired flavoring. Pour into pudding pan. Set pan in skillet of warm water and set in oven. Bake slowly until when knife is thrust into custard it comes out free from any of the custard. Take from oven at once, and set pudding-pan into dish of cold water to stop the cooking.

Ohio Potatoes.—Dice cold boiled potatoes, put in layers in granite pie-pan, cover each layer with cream sauce, a few drops of onion juice, salt, pepper and bits of butter. Sprinkle top layer with few fine bread crumbs, bits of butter on top. Bake 20 minutes in moderate oven.

OLD SONGS AND POEMS

Annie's Tryst.

[Requested.]

Your hand is cold as snail, Annie,
For cheek is wan and white,
What's gone ye tremble see, Annie,
What's gone ye tremble see, Annie,
The snail is on the goon, Wullie,
The frost is cold and keen,
But there's a burnin' fire, Wullie,
Say will ye tryst me then?

The spring will come again, Annie,
An' chase the wintry showers,
An' ye an' I will walk, Annie,
Among the summer flowers,
When a' the snail is gone,
But my heart misgives me, Annie,
Oh, will ye tryst me then?
I'll meet ye by the burn, Annie,
That whistles doon the glen?
I da' na' tryst ye here, Wullie,
But we'll ha' o'er tryst in heaven,
Wullie
In the springtime of the year,
SENT BY "ELSPETH"

OUR FOLKS' CORNER

If there is one class of individual who, more than another, is, we think, deserving of our heartfelt sympathy, it is the woman unfortunate enough to have caught a cold during this summer weather.

A BAD COLD
It is perfectly bad enough to have to endure a red nose, watery eyes, and raspy throat—all accompaniments of a "bad" cold, but to have to receive the condolences, commiserations and recommended remedies of your friends, one and all, is, to use the vernacular, "the limit."

We can speak from the bitter depths of a personal experience. It is so comforting and pleasant to enter a roomful of people and be greeted with: "Oh, have you a cold?" from all sides, when you are only too well aware that your poor proboscis is shining like a beacon light and the cold sore on your upper lip is assuming the proportions of a walnut. Of course you have a cold; isn't it plain enough without having the fact rubbed in? Your very voice betrays you raspy and stuffy and so thick that you scarcely recognize it! Yet on the street, in the bar, down at the office, anywhere and everywhere that your walk in life leads you the question is the same, "Oh, have you a cold?"

"Still more soothing is it when, after you have retired into a quiet corner of a room, there to 'mop up' with a 'handkerchief' sufficiently large to be of real use, to hear snatched remarks like this just on the other side of the arch: "Here's another of her fearful colds!" "Looks very bad!" "She's weak lungs in her family!" "She should take care," and so on.

Then there are the interminable people who never fail to offer remedies for colds. Their names are almost legion. "Take a glass of brandy," "Take a glass of gin," "Take a glass of rum," "Take a glass of whisky," "Take a glass of brandy," "Take a glass of gin," "Take a glass of rum," "Take a glass of whisky," and so on.

However, to get away from the doubtful subject of colds, I wonder if a certain school boy essay on the life of Eliza, "There was a man named Eliza. He had some bears and he lived in a cave. Some day he was thrown stones at him. I'll turn the bears on you and they'll eat you up." And they did, and he did, and the bears did.

"My first and only misstep. I was a careless, happy-go-lucky young fellow. The sky outside also had attraction for Warrington. A thousand times a fool!"

"How long ago did this happen?"

"Ten years, after all this time, you want to go back to it?"

"I have wished to go back many times, but never had money enough. I am content now. Oh, I made it honestly."

"That's a cutting from a Rangoon paper. Here's another of her fearful colds!" "Looks very bad!" "She's weak lungs in her family!" "She should take care," and so on.

"By the way, there is a man here by the name of Mallow," began the consul-general.

"That's where I was introduced," interrupted Warrington, with a smile which was grim and cruel. "I expect to call upon him. He owes me something like fifty pounds, and I am going to collect it." Then he went out.

"The consul-general dropped Mallow's perfect into the waste basket and lighted his pipe. Once more he read the telegram. The Andes Construction Company. What a twist, what a twist, and I had bank in the scheme! Nearly all of Eliza's wealth lay bound up in this enormous business which General Chetwood had founded thirty odd years before. And neither of them knew!"

"I am not a bad man at heart," he mused, "but I liked the young man's expression when I mentioned that bully Mallow."

He joined his family at five. He waved aside tea and called for a lemon-squash.

"Elsa, I am going to give you a lecture."

"Didn't I tell you?" cried Elsa to the wife. "I felt in my bones that he was going to say this very thing." She turned to her old-time friend. "Go on, lecture me."

"In the first place, you are too kind."

"They say I have a heart of ice."

"And what you think is independence of spirit is something more than that."

"A man came into my office today. He is a rich copra-grower from Penang. He spoke of you. You passed him on going out. If I had been twenty years younger I'd have punched his ugly head."

Elsa's cheeks burned. She never could forget the look in that man's eyes. The look might have been in other men's eyes, but conventionally had always veiled it; she had never seen it before. "Go on," but her voice was unsteady. "Somewhere along the frantically you made the acquaintance of a young man who calls himself Warrington, familiarly known as Parrot & Co. He is generous. Not one woman in a thousand would have declined to accept the attentions of such a man. He is cultivated, undeniably, good-looking, a strong man, mentally and physically."

Elsa's expression was now enigmatical.

"There's not much vicer to him. He fooled me unintentionally. He was quite evidently born a gentleman, of a race of gentlemen. His is not an isolated case. One misstep and the road to the devil."

The consul-general's wife sent a startled glance at Elsa, who spun her sunshade to lighten the tension of her nerves.

"He confessed frankly to me this morning that he is a fugitive from justice. He wishes to return to America. He recounted the circumstances of your meeting. To me the story appeared truthful enough. He said that you sought the introduction because of his amazing likeness to the man you are going home to marry."

"That is true," replied Elsa. "Uncle Jim, I have travelled pretty much over this world, and I never met a gentleman if Warrington is not one. There was unconscious beligerence in her tone."

"Ah, there's the difficulty which a woman will never be made to understand. Every man can, at one time or another, put himself up his good behavior. Underneath he may be a fine rascal."

"Not this one," smiling. "He warned me against himself a dozen times, but that served to make me stubborn. The fault of my conduct," added, "was not in making this parrot's acquaintance. It lies in the fact that I had nothing to do with the other passengers, from the moment that I was introduced to him."

"You forget that some of them will be your fellow-passengers all the way to Penang. That price I have no wish for. This man Mallow lives within the pale of the law; the other man is outside of it. Yet, of the two, which would you be quickest to trust?"

"The consul-general laughed. "Now you are appealing not to my knowledge of the world, but to my instinct."

"Thanks."

"I have seen Mallow dozens of times. I know him to be a scoundrel of sorts, but I doubt if bald sunlight could make him blink. Lairs have first to overcome the flickering and wavering of the eyes."

"He said that."

"Who, Warrington?" puzzled.
