DREDGING HELD UP
(From the Gloucester Northern Light)
The dredging operations in Bathurst Harbor are at a standstill at present, waiting a definite decision from the Government in regard to their continuance. Influential citizens have been to Ottawa, but so far nothing has been heard from the Government in regard to this important work, except that an engineer has been sent down to report on the matter. Cessation of the dredging now would be a great disappointment and disadvantage to the town of Bathurst, and no stone should be left unturned to influence a favorable decision.
