MONDAY MORNING, DEC. 21. 1885.

Sir John's Boemerang. When the bill creating the supreme court of Canada was introduced to the house Sir John A. Macdonald was leader of the opposition. The bill as introduced made the new court supreme in fact as well as in name, but as the leader of the opposition objected to this, and made a truly loyal" speech in advocacy of "the right of appeal to the foot of the throne," the government of the day unwisely yielded the point, and there was thus created a tribunal which is of the most malous character. As the Ottawa journal suggests, it is rather curious and porary describes. poetically just that Sir John has been repeatedly humiliated by the imperial privy council, to which he paid so much deference. Probably legislation to make impress him less unfavorably than formerly. A National Cable. That the home government should take an interest in the Canadian Pacific rail-way, for imperial purposes, is "a consum-mation devoutly to be wished;" and we hope the rumor there anent may prove true. And then, as the showman said, the And then, as the showman said, the many years—so long, in fact, that the thing will be something else—or staunch Presbyterians, who constitute the next thing will be something else-or American or other foreign influences. Net crime with indifference, if not with approonly so, but we want it to be a national val. Were it not that the people of Tocable, not belonging to any company, owned and operated, and controlled by the imperial government and the Canadian government jointly. It is disgraceful to the dominion, as well as to the empire, that for the transmission of the most important stat despatches by cable we should be dependent upon lines that are under American control. And it might prove dangerou and disastrous as well as disgraceful some day, were England at war with Russia, and were the latter power able to bribe cable officials in New York. As was shown some time ago, in Sir Hector Langevin's last report, the dominion has already a considerable telegraph mileage o its own; and we hope to see this increase from year to year. Even the free trade government of the mother country is ahead of us in this respect, having nationalized the entire domestic telegrap system years ago. And the home authori ties are evidently bent upon further ex-
