

Farm Inside as well as Out

Do some intensive farming and get three times the number of crops you do in your extensive farming.

Build one of our greenhouses, one of our thoroughly practical kind with no fuss and frills, simply a straightaway, thoroughly well-built, enduring, glass enclosure. Then raise lettuce, tomatoes, cucumbers and strawberries. You will find no difficulty to market them, and the price average will net you a nice, snug profit each year. Get a good man for your foreman; then in the winter keep on your regular summer force in the greenhouse. By doing this you can keep your good men all the year round, and go a long way towards solving your labor problem.

Incidentally, you will make money. Let us go into all sides of the question with you. Send for our Commercial Greenhouse Catalog.
