The first snow of the season reached the Red river valley on Tuesday morning of this week, when enough fell to whiten the ground.

Diminished quantity and doubtful quality is the prediction from the wine districts of Europe regarding the vintage of 1902.

Snow fell in the valley of the North Saskatchewan on Sunday, Nov. 2. The fall was light at Edmonton, but heavy at Prince Albert.

Weather Sage Foster predicts that the temperature of the week ending Nov. 10 will average above normal in the Northwest.
