

development assistance projects amounting to $125 million are currently underway in Thailand. Canada has steadfastly supported the Thai and ASEAN position on Cambodia and has provided $32 million through international agencies to assist Cambodian refugees along the Thai-Cambodia border. Over one hundred thousand Indochinese refugees have been resettled in Canada since 1975, more than 30,000 of whom came from camps in Thailand.

A series of high level visits between the two countries are indicative of the expanding relationship. These have included visits by Thai Prime Minister Prem Tinsulononda in April 1984, and the Secretary of State for External Affairs, the Right Honourable Joe Clark in 1985. International Trade Minister James Kelleher also visited Thailand in February 1986, while Thai Minister of Industry Chirayu travelled to Canada in April 1986.
