THURSDAY MORNING, NOV. 4.

Not the Men's Strike

On the evening after the strike of the hydro-electric men, the city commission put in 1400 feet of service for the soldiers at the old General Hos- and British practice. pital. If there were any Germans interested in promoting the strike they ain was responsible for starting the patriotism left in Toronto to see the been working to bring it on for years; war thru, whatever the hydro-electric and how the brutality of British hearts of the men are not in the strike, and we have every sympathy for them in the invidious position in which they find themselves

They have technical justification for a strike next May, but the Germans may have defeated the allies by that time, and it would not be left to Britons to decide the issues of strikes. The strikers have not thought of too remote from them, and the natural feeling of loyalty to their union has misled them.

With the strength that unionist leaders exercise, they should above all things be prudent and reasonable. They will never lose anything for themselves or their men by the use of good judgment and common sense. It was not good judgment nor common sense to call out the hydro-electric employes on a strike for higher wages, and leave the employes of a rival company still at work on much lower That robbed the public sympathy at once. It is impossible for the unions to discriminate against a public ownership industry and expect the action to be regarded as reasonable. It would have been unreasonable to strike at this time in any case, or against the lower schedule which has not been objected to, but it is obvious that all parties must be placed on the same basis. The men are placed in the absurd position of having to go to another firm to ask for work at lower wages than they have struck against. The men feel all these inconsistencies and they are unable to explain them. Their hearts are not in the strike.

Why then was the strike called? If all the evidence could be laid on the table we believe that it would do more to clear up party politics in Toronto than anything that has occurred in the past history of the city. There has been a reason for the strike. It is evidently not the interest of the men. Certain influences have been working against the chairman of the City Hydro Commission for a long time past. A dead set has been made on the hydro organization for various private reasons, wholly unconnected with business or business competition. The effect of these insidious attacks thru certain channels has been to create forces that have got out of hand to some extent, and have taken their own direction for their own ends. Chairman Ellis will shortly be up for reappointment to his position, and if the Germans did not engineer the strike. and the men have no heart in it, there is no other way of accounting for it but to attribute it to the man or the men who are anxious to discredit Chairman Ellis at an apparently opportune time. When the facts all come out, as one of these days they will, then we shall know why Mr. Curran did not call out the T. E. L. men at the same time as the hydro men, and why the matter was pushed at this time instead of nearer the date in May, at which the award was to take effect. A strike in winter is not such a satisfactory arrangement for the men, as to oblige us to believe that they would not have consented to wait till spring. The captain of all this attack on the hydro will some day be compelled to disclose his plan of campaign and the real phiective of such manoeuvres.

Back to the Paladins

It is quite in the Junker German style to attack and insult a woman. The anonymous letters circulated in New York threatening Lady Beck are just what might be expected from the committee which is conserving German kultur in the United States. It is strange that the sporting spirit does not appear to be able to find lodgmen in the German breast. We trust that fine a Swedish lady been given a similar position in connection with any Canadian function no word of reproach would have been uttered, even the Sweden is perhaps the least friendly of the neutral nations to the British cause. But Lady Beck, British to the core, and wedded to a loyal Britisher of German descent, could not visit a friendly neutral nation without the German boors outraging all the laws of hospitality and all the canons of good taste. We commend to the Germans the old Saracen codes of honor and courtesy which their ally, the Sultan, may have in his library at

Miss Chrystal MacMillan

We publish elsewhere a letter from Miss Alice A. Chown in which she appears to be carried away, as so many others have, by a chivalrous regard for an old country visitor who talked excellent common sense when she visited Toronto some years ago, but who has since been at The Hague and fallen under the influence of the German plotters at the alleged peace conference held there. Miss Jane Addams has also been joined with Miss Mac-Millan, and in company of a Hungarian lady, and under the tuition of one of the cleverest women in Germany, an nsidious campaign has been carried on and is being carried on in various countries, neutral and belligerent. with the object of undermining British influence and British prestige. At The Hague things were said more or less openly. Now the purveyors of these scandals and slanders have to be more discreet. With all the impressive importance of membership in the International Council of Women Miss MacMillan has been able to attach many innocent parties to the German policy of discrediting British honor

If Miss Chown has heard how Britmay be assured that there is enough war, and that Sir Edward Grey has strike premoters may think. The soldiers in the field rivals anything that has been "invented" about the noble German troops; and how the British capitalists have played the game of egging on the German Emperor to build a navy, so that the British public might be egged on to build a bigger one; and how the stage was all set for the war long before the poor dear innocent German emperor was duped into defending himself and his bethings in this way. The war has been loved fatherland; and how the next war has already been arranged for, as of course there is no possibility of spiration, then she is guileless indeed. If she has not heard it, then she has

We must believe that recorded the unimpeachable facts of the diplomacy and the preparations which led up to the war. They have to fight them. been studied and analyzed by all kinds of scholars and thinkers, and it is strange that it is only those who have German connections or who have come under German influence who find the defenders of Belgium to be as bad as those who first attacked Belgium.

This is Miss MacMillan's position and apparently Miss Chown's. When Miss Chown says the causes of war are not national but human and economic, she might as well say that the causes of humanity are not men but people in business. Generalities like this mean little or nothing and deceive nobody who is on the alert. Nations stand for principles and ideals. The German nation stands for militarism and force. It boasts of that fact, and the kaiser appeals to God to enable him to slaughter all his enemies and annex their territory. Last night's despatches state that he is willing to quit with the annexation of Belgium and Courland and an indemnity of $7,500,000,000. There is nothing national about that, perhaps. but only something human and econo-

If we are ever to be free from war we must persuade the makers of war to change their human and economic nature. The maker of this war was the kaiser and his advisers. Miss Mac-Millan would fain persuade us, and perhaps sha has persuaded Miss Chown already, that Great Britain is really worse than Germany, and ought to give her all she asks, and make peace at once. Most of the sensible Britons we have met are prepared to go to perdition before they accept any such doctrine
