alk his head off-providing you catch eim when he isn't busy, which is only at rare intervals.

However, an Egyptian sphink is veritable talking-machine alongside of the veteran horseman when it comes to dwelling on his own accomplicaments. In other words, Dan will talk fluently on every subject but "McEwen." Yesterday afternoon The Advertises porting editor hied himself to good old een's Park in search of horse lore, Information, and Mr. Dan McEwen. He found all that he sought-and more. The track, when the scribe hove into the gates, was deserted, save for one lone horseman, who was dreamlly jogging his pet nag about the half-mile nciosure at a four or five minute gait. Along the fence near the McGinnis stables was standing a group of horsemen engaged in a spirited discussion races would number 275 or 276, and louder than words.

In one of the stalls of the stable was eventually located the veteran Mc Ewen. He and a stable-hand were busily engaged in the salubrious (?) Talk horse lore to Dan McEwen, the amous Canadian reinsman, and he will alk his head off—providing you catch efforts on his behalf a little bit, for i.e persisted in raising one hoof to Fr angle which reminded one strongly of the famous Maud of Fred Opper fame. Eventually, however, the trick was done, and Mr. McEwen-or "Danny," as he is familiarly known, in turf cir cles, came forth.

"Would you mind giving out a few items of horse lore for publication?" Danny bucked a little, then he shied -not because he was a colt, understand, but because he was a veteran

Certainly he would! Be glad to talk horse, exhibit horses, and cite their good and bad-(if they had any)-qual ities. But talk of McEwen-never!
