Lemnos Island lends additional great interest to the developments in that quarter. The rumors of a determination by the Kaiser to strike at Britain's power in Egypt and the east makes the situation more serious, and explains the increased activity in rushing Allied troops to the Balkan region.

The Russians are pressing the Germans back along their front in the east. On the Italian front Austrian acroplanes have bombarded two towns, killing and wounding a few people, evidently endeavoring to emulate the German example of "frightfulness" in London. The Italian armies, however, continue to gain ground.

Bewildered I looked up and about me and I saw several men dressed in white.

Then I realized something had happened to me, and in answer to my questions I was told that I was in a field hospital, eight miles to the rear of the first line of trenches. Think of it. Approximately an hour after being wounded had been rushed in an automobile am bulance eight miles to the rear, had been entered in a hospital, given an X-ray examination, operated upon, and was adrinking champagne.

I felt but little pain, for I was still slightly under the influence of the chloroform. My next big surprise was when I was put in a large airy room, filled with clean white beds, one of which I appreciated very much, you can be sure. I was kept there three days and then I was moved to Chalons Sur Marne, where I expect to stay a few days more.
