NEW CANADIAN LOAN IN NEW YORK

Sun Reports Completion of Negotiations for One of $75,000,000

New York, June 28.-This morning's New York Sun says: "That negotiations for the flotation in this market of a new loan of $75,000,000 to the Canadian government have been completed, was learned in an authoritative quarter yesterday. It is said that the issue, which is expected to be long term and to be offered on a basis of 5 1/2 per cent or better, will be floated early next month. It is said, for the purpose of providing part of the funds to meet the maturity, on August 1, of $100,000,000 Canadian government two year 5 per cent unsecured gold notes, which were put out on a 5 per cent basis.

Watching For Signs Of Building Work

In its summary of the iron, steel and machinery markets for week ended June 26 Canadian Machinery and Manufacturing News, Toronto, makes the following comment: "The particular branch of the steel industry interested in structural is watching eagerly for some sign of the opening of the building season. It is estimated that there must be, in Toronto alone, some $15,000,000 worth of building work. When these can be converted into real business there should be some trade worth securing. A movement in structural would be good news for the Canadian trade. It is difficult to keep as closely in touch with the situation here in the United States, because statistics are more complete and more accessible. For instance, the Bridge Builders and Structural Society can state definitely, in proportion to the capacity of shops, the work placed is as follows: January, 12 per cent; February, 13 1/2 per cent; March, 17 per cent; April, 24 1/2 per cent; May, 29 per cent. It is worthy of note that some of the American steel mills are now asking a higher price for such staple items as steel plates and iron and steel bars, the latter being about $1 a ton. They quote 2.70 for plate against the prevailing 2.55. There are other indications that bolster up the argument of those who hold that a buying movement of any size at all will bring about an increase in prices, although they are yet far above the pre-war level. While all this may be quite true, it is no use losing sight of the fact that a good-sized tonnage gets a very fair market preference. Small tools and supplies are not selling any volume. The market for these is tighter than usual. Most of the shops that have been getting in equipment have done so and not until now. As to the point of production will there be any call for new supplies for replacement purposes. There are various orders and inquiries out in the market in certain sections, but it is hard to tell whether they are all genuine, or merely tested in to find out the strength and movement of the market.

ARMENIAN GIRLS TEL. OF MASSACRES

Escaped Victims of Turkish And Circassian Cruelty

Held Naked and Starving-Hundreds Slaughtered With Clubs as Parties up to 5,000 Were Taken to Syrian Desert

(New York Times) Personal narratives told by Christian women and girls of Armenia, who were deported from their homes to virtual captivity or slavery in the camps of the Turkey, Circassians and Arabs, or were released by the Turkish government in Asia Minor, have been received by the American Committee for Armenia and Syria. A statement issued by the committee says that the women whose stories are now made public, were released by the Turkish government in Asia Minor. Cable dispatches to the committee have reported that numbers of these women were wandering about the country, craved by starvation and exposure. As far as possible they are being gathered up by the committee's relief workers and placed in homes established for their care. A late telegram said that fifteen such homes have been established in Asia Minor.

Stories of these Armenian victims of Turkish atrocity were obtained by Dr. W. A. Kennedy, Field Director of the Lord Mayor's Relief Fund of London. Dr. Kennedy assured Dr. Wirt that he personally read the affidavits to the narrators and they signed them in his presence.

The committee's statement, "many of the Turks, believing that by doing they could escape punishment, turned the women-many of them with babies-into the streets. Cable dispatches to the committee have reported that numbers of these women were wandering about the country, craved by starvation and exposure. As far as possible they are being gathered up by the committee's relief workers and placed in homes established for their care. A late telegram said that fifteen such homes have been established in Asia Minor.

Hundreds of girls were torn from the other members of their families and taken to the Syrian desert. Scores were taken to live in captivity naked for months and suffering from sunburns.

Armenian girls who escaped death, the committee declares, were battered, killed, or sold into slavery. Some saw their fathers or friends murdered. In many cases they were bound and forced to live on the ground, lips and chin, to mark them as Moslem women.

Escaped Girls Tell of Massacres. Generally, the stories indicate that the captives were moved sometimes in large groups from Armenia southward toward the desert of Syria.

One story of this journey into the desert was told by Takouhi Gueushkhanian, a girl of 18 years, who with her father, mother, four sisters and a brother was deported from Hadjin, in Adana province, in May, 1918. They moved southward to Aleppo and then further on toward the Syrian desert, until the party numbered about 2,000 families, she said, and sent a detachment of fifty-two men with it to buy their security. The amount was refused and the men were beaten and sent back.

"They raised an additional 550 lira and took 2,000 Turkish pounds in gold to the Circassian Bey who took the money and sent them on to Aleppo and then further on toward the Syrian desert, until the party numbered about 2,000 families, she said, and sent a detachment of fifty-two men with it to buy their security. The amount was refused and the men were beaten and sent back.

A few days later, according to the girl's story, the party was taken to a desert place and there they were held for several days. The men were separated and taken away and soon after the Circassians returned and divided among themselves some of the clothing which she recognized as belonging to some of the men which they had taken away. The next day 500 more were taken away and killed.

As the refugees resumed their journey on the following morning she saw the bodies of some of the men she knew. They had been clubbed to death.

"A few days after this," reads the narrative, "they were told that for safety each family of women and children was to go to the house of an Arab. The Arabs stripped them and robbed them of their clothing and sent them back to the Circassians, who commenced to kill them at once with their knives, attacking women and children, about 180 in all. Twenty-two boys and eleven girls were saved and taken to the tent of the Circassians and she was taken with her sister to the village of Gerbelieh, where she was beaten because she did not give them gold that they believed she had."

After having been kept awhile by a Circassian, she and her sister were sent to another Circassian and then to the house of another Circassian in Shegrub. She is now in the orphanage at Aleppo and her sister is in an Armenian house in Nusebin.

Other incidents evidently dealing with this terrible journey of the Armenians to Shegrub were related to Dr. Kennedy by Araxa Bartulian, a girl of 17 years, who was a pupil in the American girls' school at Ada Basar, in the western portion of Asia Minor, near Constantinople. She spoke English.

"At Shegrub," the narrative says, "we saw a party of 800 men, women and children, all naked. It was in July and
