This company, as well as the Simms Co., will carry on building operations this year, and the two concerns will give permanent employment to a large number of persons. The population of Fairville will increase, and the number of people to be served by a continuous car service to and from the city will grow with this growth of population, and with the increased number of persons finding employment on that side the owners of the pulp mill, given yestercity will grow with this growth of population, and with the increased number of persons finding employment on that side of the river. Therefore local pressure should be brought to bear without delay to hasten the construction of the bridge. Then there is the extension of the street railway to East St. John. Whatever local pressure can do to hasten an agreement between the department of railways and the St. John Railway Company should be done at once; for the street car line must be extended as soon as possible to East St. John.

There is war in the provincial government camp in Northumberland county. The hurried visit of Premier Flemming and his plea for harmony has not produced the desired results. An effort has been made to get rid of Hon. John Morrissy, and he has been bitterly assailed by the wing of the party for which the Chatham-World speaks. It was said yesterday that a number of the stalwarts would absent themselves from today's convention at Newcastle. W. B. Dickson, M. P. P., went to Newcastle and addressed a meeting of government supporters on Monday evening, and begged them to adopt the coalition principle as laid down by Mr. Flemming. Mr. Morrissy made a similar plea, and deplored the feeling that had been displayed by some members of the party. Despite these efforts to restore harmony, it is said that the discontented Conservatives may put a ticket of their own in the field.

Friends of the government have tried to make it appear that there was no special significance in the premier's visit to Newcastle, but the more recent developments, and the admissions publicly made by Mr. Morrissy show that the situation, from the government standpoint, has become desperate. The outlook for the opposition is correspondingly cheerful.

(By J. W. Foley, in New York Times)

There are three Sorrows, worth my while to grieve;

Death, when I may be called upon to leave The friends I love, or they to part from me As mariners upon the enchanted sea. That stretches, bleak and black, here at my feet, where ships go forth to join the phantom fleet

Of souls adrift upon an unknown shore, And what my port, I may return no more. position is correspondingly cheerful.

WHAT THE RECORD SHOWS

By way of keeping the record free from error, it may be noted that it was Hon. Dr. Pugsley who prevailed upon the Liberal government to take over the task of constructing wharves in St. John harbor, which up to that time the city itself had done. He also secured large appropriations for dredging, and prepared comprehensive plans which are now being carried out, and which will eventually give West and what my port, I may return no more. It was Dr. Pugsley who first talked of making a great harbor at Courtenay Bay, and for this he was ridiculed to the utmost by his political opponents.

The facts are all too fresh in the public mind to be obscured by false assertions. The city knows what it owes to the zeal and energy of Dr. Pugsley. The city knows what it owes to the zeal and energy of Dr. Pugsley. It was not necessary for the citizens to spend anxious days and nights wondering whether he would do what ought to be done. Their attitude was rather one of wonder as to what he would next be planning for the good of St. John. He was quick to see and bold to plan, and the city today reaps the profit of his foresight and his devotion to its interests.

That had my heart for its mixting place.

There are three Sorrows, worth my while to share:

So I shall measure up the grief to see if it be ought of part of these, the Three. And if it be not one of these worth while I shall be glad to melt it with a smile!

When Dr. Pugsley had plans of the completed works at Courtenay Bay thrown upon a screen at a public meeting, the Standard ridiculed the performance; but today it gleefully tells how an audience cheered at one of the picture houses last evening when the "plans of Courtenay Bay and a prophetic view of the work as it will appear, when it is completed" were Bay and a prophetic view of the work as it will appear when it is completed" were exhibited. Let credit be given where credit is honestly due.
