

BORDER STATES AND CANADA COMPETING FOR SETTLERS

Stipulated Rights Ignored, Promise to Return Property Broken, and Communist Propaganda Unchecked.

Spokane, Wash., June 15.—There is friendly but nevertheless energetic competition between western Canada and the northwestern states in the matter of getting their unemployed lands populated by high-class settlers who will give a good account of themselves and convert these lands into productive areas. This is evidenced by reports coming from controlling offices of the Canadian Pacific Railway in possession of local representatives living in that road as well as reports coming from various states along the Canadian border which show in detail not only the varied inducements held out to the prospective settler, but also the actual personnel attention paid each individual who investigates the prospects in the northwestern states or in western Canada.

The report shows that while the Canadian government has expended millions of dollars during the past in building up the western half of the territory, the rest of the world, governmental expenditures, its total to date being upwards of $85,000,000. The railroad as a colonizing agency has on its own account engaged into western Canada 54,000 settlers and placed them on the lands of the company. This has been done at an expense to the railroad of $1,250 for each

John: "To church in the next parish."
Pastor: "I don't like that. What would you say if your sheep strayed to some one else's property?"

SPAIN'S POLICY IN MOROCCO DISAPPOINTS COMMISSIONER

Colonists Are Called Incapable of Conducting the Work for Which They Were Sent to the Country.

Madrid, June 17.—It goes without saying that General Damaso Berenguer, High Commissioner of Spain in Morocco and commander in chief of the forces there, is a bitterly disappointed man, and that through no fault of his own. Placed in control of the North African effort by the government, he has found that the military laws of seniority being disregarded, he brought a new spirit of thoroughness to this endeavor which was working well despite the paucity of assistance and encouragement which he gathered from the government at Madrid.

He set himself to emulate as far as possible the effort being made in French Morocco by his friend Marshal Lyautey, with whom he is in frequent communication.

Now the weakness of the Spanish Government in inclining toward a semi-withdrawal and the substitution of a colonial army recruited on a voluntary basis for policing business in place of the armed endeavor that has been in progress hitherto fills the general with forebodings. He gives few interviews but all who are intimate with the general know that he who has known Morocco well since his youth and has deeply studied Spain's position in regard to her, feels that his country is now making a desperately serious mistake, for which some time soon she will be very sorry.

General Berenguer has just made a statement to the Diario Universal, the organ of the Count de Romanones, which is expressive of his disappointment. From time to time criticisms have been leveled against the colonizing capabilities of the Spaniards. In reality they seem to be much better in Morocco now than in other parts previously, but General Berenguer is bitter in his condemnation of the Spanish effort in this matter.

Spain has not put her back to this colonizing effort, he thinks, and that is why the achievements of France cannot be imitated. The colonizers who leave Spain for Morocco are of an inferior kind and incapable of the work, he says. The majority of them are little business men hardly better than packmen whom the Labor difficulties in Spain have turned toward Morocco.

General Berenguer considers that Spain ought to have in Morocco an army equal to that which France has in her zone because in reality the Spanish zone is as extensive as the part of French Morocco in which Marshal Lyautey keeps his troops for the maintenance of order. As to the substitution of the regular troops from Spain by a colonial army recruited on the voluntary plan, he does not believe that when such a corps is established there will be enough volunteers to satisfy the needs of the case.

He says finally that he has determined to remain at his post as long as he has the confidence of the Government and that current rumors as to his resignation may be disregarded.

GREECE DISPLAYS OPTIMISM IN MEETING FORCED LOAN ACT

Cost of Living Advances and Business Becomes Slack — Land Mortgage System Proposed.

Athens, May 23.—(By Mail).—The Forced Loan act has been in operation for over a month. During the whole period little else has been discussed. The subject has dominated the working of the press, the attention of politicians and financiers, and constituted the theme on which the street-boy has handed jokes.

The loan, as previously explained in the Christian Science Monitor, depends upon the withdrawal from circulation of 1,600,000,000 drachmas. This is arrived at by the actual cutting in halves of all Greek bank notes.

Half Becomes Bond
One-half, bearing the image of George Stavros, founder of the National Bank (the National Bank being the issue bank of Greece), is to circulate until July 7 as a new token, worth half the value originally inscribed on the whole bank note.

The other half, bearing the Greek nation seal, does not circulate but constitutes a provisional bond of the new loan. These bonds are now accepted as pledges for advances of money in all banks, and after July 7 are to be exchanged for definite bonds of the loan.

The first two weeks that followed the passing of the law were tumultuous. The measure touched everybody down to the lowest mental, and nobody knew how to manage. In general, however, the Greek nation met the situation with courage, optimism and excellent good humor.

There was a rush on the banks for withdrawals of deposits at first and exchange operations were closed for 10 days. Afterwards, values rose and fell from hour to hour. A consistent feature was a rise both in foreign exchange and in the Greek nation seal. Shares of the old Government sterling loans.

Apprehension Soon Dispelled
Shares of banks and private companies were not so much affected. During the first fortnight, after the loan was issued they went down, as it was strongly rumored that new heavy taxation would be laid on all banks and limited liability companies. Later on, after a definite statement to the contrary had been issued by the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, quotations went up. Since then the general atmosphere has been calmer.

The cost of living, however, has gone up generally by 25 per cent, some commodities rising in price by 50 per cent. There have also been many difficulties in trade. Coal imports, for example, have stopped and steamers are lying idle in the Piræus, as merchants will not take the risk of incurring liabilities which they may be unable to liquidate. Factories are still running, but threaten to close when the fuel they already have in stock runs out.

With a view to facilitating the use of the new currency the National Bank of Greece grants advances to other banks here without interest, to be used on behalf of the Government to meet exigencies arising from withdrawals of deposits until matters have settled down. Advances are also being made against the scrip of the forced loan.

To meet the decrease in their deposits and the consequent limitation of the circle of their business, some of the banks here have raised their rates of interest on advances, hoping thereby to increase their deposits in old currency.

It is learned from official sources that forced circulation of the drachma
