welcomed on behalf of his associates, the city's visitors, and to the outside lodges he acknowledged the deep appreciation felt by the York county brethren, at their valuable co-operation.

The opinion, said the county master, stands on a white berse. After the parade relation.

The opinion, said the county master, that an Orange demonstration, or the annual observance of the 12th of July signified to the Roman church an existing enmity, was becoming more and more dissipated. and must eventually die out forever. What was the groundwork of the Orange Order, but the practice of the lofty charaity of Jesus Christ and the observance of the teachings of the sermon on the mount? In addition the order stood for unity, for civil and religous liberty, and for equal, fair dealings with all men. The order was not a standing menace to the Roman Catholic church, and is was the wish of all true Orangemen that they would dwell amicably side by side with their neighbors of another faith. But it could be questioned "Why a parade, and why a demonstrative display of Orange isms."

A people were great not alone in the things of today. There was a wealth in bye-gone days and in keeping up, and in softening the old trudition, a stimulus was given the practicability of continued lofty attainment. Two hundred years ago their forefathers had fought a good fight, had kept the faith, and upheld the principles which are dominant in the British race today. The speaker again pointed out the fallacy of considering the Orange order one of narrow bigotry. Not alone did it guard liberty and array itself against the oppressor, but toward a crown, such as that of Great Britain's, did it promote and influence loyalty of the purest nature. Whatever portion of the globe in which the Anglo-Saxon had settled, Orangeism, with its wholesome principles, could be found still echoing the songs of the flag.

While endeavoring always to encourage friendship and to enjoy harmony instead of enterories it was well to remember.

A feet are treating the orange order one of narrow bigotry. The present of the first time in many, years the United States flag was carried by some visiting for the verning the varioual Arthem and cheers for the king. A feature of the parade and elongent in wh

As soon as landed, the St. John lodges formed up and with bands playing march of three new lodges, and there was a of three new lockes, and there was a strong liklihood a fourth being soon formed. He urged his hearers to ever realize that the constitution and ritual of their order was second to none, and in their daily life and actions to strive to exemplify what it stood for.

Grand Secretary Neil J. Morrison received a hearty reception. He acknowledged his thanks, and after a few By 2.30 o'clock all the lodges had assembled at Smythe street, and forming up, marched off in the following order:

Policeman George Rideout, Sergt. Philbeen a growth in membership and much activity, particularly in the past year. He regretted that not as much interest in the regretted that not as much interest in the work of the order was shown in the cities as in the country districts. In St. John and Fredericton there was a certain laxity in marked contrast to the deep and practical interest shown in all lodges established through the country.

Regarding Orangeism, and the wrong impression which so many entertain toimpression which so many entertain to-ward it, the grand secretary said the prinples which directly led to the old fend n Ireland were different to the Orang principles of today, and every membershould not only be proud of his organiza tion, but exploit to the world the noble principles for which it stood.

Fred M. Sproul was the next speaker.
He congratulated his associates of York, and on behalf of the Hampton delegation, thanked the Fredericton lodges for their reception. The brethren had met, he said, not to celebrate the 12th of July in the intolerable spirit which had been attributed to them. Their demonstration was not to offend those who held different opinions on the matter of religious belief; not because of a centain contest long ago not because of a certain contest long ago in Ireland, but to show the world their dherence and devotion to the principle which that battle made dominant.

In a sense, the Orange Association was as old as mankind, for the principles which it stands for were implanted in the breast of mankind at the creation, and are elements in manhood which make for love of liberty and love of power.

It was no inconsiderable matter to Protestantism that such an order as the range body existed. It was the buffer Orange body existed. It was the buffer between oppressor and oppressed, and was a guarantee of free and equal citizenship for Protestant as well as Catholic. The order stood for all that tends to make manhood better, and if its principles were observed there would sure be a corresponding elevation of moral sentiment. The ponding elevation of moral standards. The order stood for loyalty to empire, for so briety, and adherence to the doctrine of Christian charity. The order strengthen ed education in Canada and cemented all right thinking Canadians in renewed de-votion to crown and empire. The speaker outlined the loyalty shown in the do minion during the late war, and pointed minion during the late war, and pointed out that never had a pro-Boer been discovered in an Orange odge. The society was not in favor of war, but strove through quiet influence to ever foster maintenance of empire. While agreeing that the society has had a great record ion could exist on its past record. only manner in which these tradition could be kept and its principles continu could be kept and its principles continu-ally to the fore, was through constant vig-ilance. A feature of the parade was that for the first time in many years the United States flag was carried by some visiting Orangemen from Buffalo.
