COLONIAL.

From the Liberal.

QUEBEC, September 27.

The redressing of all grievances in the Province by the authorities in England appears to be put off sine die for the purpose of protecting the official herd here in the enjoyment of their salaries. Pluralists continue to receive the pay of several officers, while the country in vain exclaims against the system of abuse which has existed from the period of the conquest to this day. Is it surprising that the affections of the great body of the people of this province should be estranged from a government which not only tolerates but encourages the growth of the evil? The political dissensions which have distracted the peace of society for so long past, have not at all affected the class of privileged stipendiaries here. The people suffer in the meantime; but the officials revel in the enjoyment of their salaries as long as the political differences in the Province continue.—When Lord Gosford arrived here he promised great things—but what has he done? He has made common cause with the enemies of the people, whenever an opportunity offered,—nay, he has done more, he has taken advantage of the little virtue some of his former friends possessed, and made them the ready tools of all his treacherous and despicable schemes. But, fortunately for the Province, the designs of the administration upon the rights and liberties of the people were detected in time to prevent all the evil such base combinations were calculated to engender. These parasites of power have been denounced by the country at large, as men devoid of independence, honor, or integrity.—They may still sit in obsequious servility at my Lord's table, and laugh, in chorus, at his Excellency's bad jokes, but they cannot conceal the fact from themselves, that the public generally look upon them, and their master, with feelings of unmitigated contempt.

The attempts by Lord Gosford, to govern the country by bribery and corruption, has happily failed. His successor may be more fortunate in restoring harmony in the Province. He will at least have the advantage of knowing that insincerity and duplicity are as despicable in private as in public life—and the man who thinks to insure respect by the display of either will be grievously mistaken. A great practical evil of which we, Colonists, have to complain, is the almost total irresponsibility of our Governors. A Parliamentary impeachment in England for misconduct in the Colonies is a matter, for a variety of reasons, next to impossible. Some tribunal ought to exist here for the trial and punishment of high state culprits. Until Governors be made responsible to the people they oppress, for their acts, we shall never see the dawn of good government in the Province. For the irresponsible exercise of power is always abused.
