The new establishment of the McLaughlin Carriage Co. OSHAWA, ONT.

From the Toronto Globe: WHEN on the morning of December 7, 1899, the extensive factory and warehouses of the McLaughlin Carriage Company, of Oshawa, were completely destroyed by fire, the citizens of that town might well have been excused for believing they had suffered a loss that was almost irreparable. For over thirty years this enterprising company had been part and parcel of Oshawa, bound up in its prosperity, giving employment to hundreds of hands, paying out hundreds of thousands of dollars in wages, and ever foremost in everything that tended to the advancement and welfare of Oshawa. The morning of December 7 last saw the splendid establishment of the McLaughlin Company in ashes, nothing remaining of the buildings, the costly plant and the expensive and varied stock of vehicles of all descriptions; a few piles of lumber only, that the flames had passed by as too insignificant to touch, marking the site where a few hours previously a great industry had stood, pulsating with life and energy and enterprise. There may at that moment have been some who thought that the commercial edifice erected at the cost of so many years and so much labor, and so suddenly destroyed, might not again arise in their midst, and that Oshawa had lost one of the principal factors in the material prosperity of the town. Less than a year after this event there stands, not exactly on the same site, but adjacent to it, another great factory, larger, more modern, better equipped in every way, with an increased capacity for production, again the establishment of the McLaughlin Carriage Company, and a lasting monument to the enterprise and pluck of the members of the firm. The building is thoroughly modern in every respect, being erected on what is known as the slow-burning system, the floors being five inches thick. Profiting by past experience, the company have taken every possible precaution against fire. A sprinkling system is installed all over the factory and warehouses, while the steam pump belonging to the system has a capacity of 1,000 gallons per minute. The machinery is all new, and every piece is of the latest and best design that money could procure. The company claim to have the largest and best equipped carriage factory in the British Empire, and have a capacity for turning out upward of 16,000 finished vehicles per annum. They have always adhered to the principle of making and to this policy largely they ascribe their success. The new premises are alike a credit to the town of Oshawa and to the Dominion as well. We wish the company every success in their large undertaking.

"One grade only, and that the best,"
