Helped Out From the Bench

A young lawyer is the hero of this story. At least, he was young when the incident occurred. Now his name is so prominent in legal circles that it would be unkind to reveal it.

He was defending a criminal and, in doing so, was making his first appearance in court.

"The unfortunate client for whom it is my privilege to appear," he said, his tongue and lips dry and thick; "the unfortunate client, your honor, whom I am defending—ahem, ahem—I will repeat, your honor, the unfortunate man whom I here represent—I might say, this most miserable and unfortunate man—"

Just then the judge leaned forward and said, in a soft, encouraging manner: "You may proceed, sir. So far the court is with you."—Popular Magazine.

ILLEGAL FIREARMS.

(Ottawa Review) It would appear that a good many people do not realize that there is a law in existence against the carrying of firearms. It is perfectly lawful to own and even have shot-guns, but it is not only dangerous but unlawful if we have any of them on our person.

LOCK UP THE LOAFERS.

(London Advertiser) Lock up the loafers! That's the best way to deal with the problem of winter burglaries which the city may face. The class that will perpetrate these crimes is to be found hanging around the curbstones most of the summer. When winter comes they feel the pinch, and find their pockets empty. They are ready to rob and assault. The police may run the bills by sentencing these men as long as they like, but far better that they should be put in the public rather than the private pen.

THE ADEN MARKET.

Earth's Hottest Town a Busy Hide Mart.

Skins, firewood, gum arabicum, beeswax and other articles are transported from the mountainous Aden hinterland on the backs of camels to the market place in Aden Camp. These caravans very often cover a large distance and their trip sometimes ranges from five to ten days, according to the size of the caravan and the speed they are able to maintain.

This is at present the only means of transportation there, since there are no railroads in the country. At various times merchants of Djibouti, which is a small French town across the straits, somewhat southwest, have tried to create a skin market in that place to the detriment of Aden, but they have never succeeded.

Large quantities of these skins are regularly shipped to the United States, says the Shoe and Leather Reporter, and it is estimated that at least 60 per cent. of the entire trade with Aden is conducted with the United States. One particular line, which in its great majority is shipped to this country, is goatskins of various grades. Abyssinian goatskins arrive at irregular intervals, but most always in pretty good sized quantities, owing to the fact that great caravans are formed in the interior of this country, as far as Addis-Ababa, the capital and residence of the famous Negus Menelik.

North of Aden as far as Hodeidah, Ghizan, Gumeddah, up to Jeddah skins are brought to Aden by way of sailboats. This gives one an idea of the vast business territory which the trade of Aden is covering and one need not wonder about the large quantities which are regularly exported from that port. In addition to goatskins great quantities of skins (Mochas) are also shipped from there.

The main street in Aden is typical of all eastern cities with their bazaars and crowded narrow lanes. It is certainly not a pleasure for any European trader to live in Aden. But one could hardly imagine the keen competition which is created through the public auctions of all the skins and skins arrivals. Owing to this fact the margins of profit are limited and calculations have to be made so closely that every possible means must be used to reduce the expenses of the skins. Almost every large hide and skin importer and dealer in this country has local houses or agents there and this market is in constant competition with this port, as prices are very fluctuating.

The town of Aden is situated on one of the hottest places on earth. It is situated low with barren rocks encircling the city on all sides and rising far above the town. The thermometer ranges from 100 degrees to 120 degrees in the shade.

It is a very sensible custom there that every European employee of this trade receives a six months leave of absence after he has accomplished three years of service, and he receives full pay for the entire period of his leave, including his passage upon his return for another term of three years. But a great many of these employees find themselves unable to stand the climate and return before the specified time of the contract. From November to March is the most pleasant time of the year, as this is the rainy season, but even then the heat is so intense and the climate so damp that the natives are justified in saying, "God has created Aden; what has He made hell for?"

As soon as there are sufficient quantities of hides and skins in the market an auction is held and the highest bidder obtains the goods. These auctions are very irregular, depending upon the arrival of caravans or sailboats. After the skins are sold they are assorted and packed in straw mats peculiar to this country, whereupon they are sent to the various consignees in Europe and America. The buyers for American houses have succeeded in outstripping the European competition and securing the greater part of the arrivals, so that it is only a question of time before possibly from 70 to 80 per cent. of the skins sold at the auctions of Aden and Bahallah will eventually find their way to American markets.

Pauperized.

In a discussion of the pauperizing effect of indiscriminate charity, Mrs. Rufus Sage, whose charity is always wise, once said: "I used to know a good old clergyman who devoted over half of his income to the poor."

"In this good clergyman's parish there was a man to whom he gave every week coal and flour, sugar and tea, potatoes and meat. Remembering how the clergyman had to deny himself in order to give so generously, a lady said to this pensioner one day: "Don't you think it's very good of Dr. Fiftily to look after you like this and give you all these nice things?"

"The pensioner, who was lurching on the good old clergyman's bounty at the time, looked up with his mouth full of steak.

"Good of him?" he exclaimed. "Why what's he fur?"—Boston Herald.

Catarrhal Deafness Can Be Cured

A Publisher's Statement Given.

Mr. George Warner, publisher of the Masonic Register, Toronto, was cured of deafness by Catarrhazone, and says: "During the past thirteen years my hearing has been badly affected. I could neither hear the noise of the street cars or the sound of horses' feet on the pavement. Before I used Catarrhazone three days I noticed a great change. I gradually improved till now I can hear a whisper across the room. I cannot tell how much I value Catarrhazone, which has my strongest endorsement as a cure for deafness."

Eye Alone Detects Icebergs.

There at present is no absolute method of detecting icebergs, says Captain C. E. Johnson and A. S. Gamble, of the cutters Seneca and Miami, which patrolled the route of the trans-Atlantic liners from April to May.

Capt. Johnson refuted the prevalent theory that a sudden drop in temperature meant the proximity of icebergs. Little or no change in temperature was noticeable, he said. No can icebergs, as generally supposed, be detected from a ship's whistle or bells, as, according to Capt. Johnson, a perpendicular berg may give an echo from some direction, but a lanting face reflects the sound. About ninety per cent. of St. Seneca's efforts to get echoes were futile.

The presence of murrins (a kind of auk), the officer declares, indicated the presence of icebergs, but he advises mariners to pay no attention to other birds.

A Unique Tobacco.

Perique, a unique sort of tobacco raised in this country, is limited in quantity, and the District producing it is confined to a small section of St. James parish, on the east side of the Mississippi river, Louisiana. The total production is about 10,000 pounds a year. This tobacco is protected by an involved method of sweating and curing, which was developed by the Arcadians of St. James' parish. When picked the tobacco twists which are placed into loose pressure until the juices are forced out and the leaves become black and sticky. These juices in the "twisting" are reabsorbed, and during the process sun is blown into the mass. It is then stored to cure, and at the end of several months a characteristic aromatic odor is given off. It is used in chewing, and some manufacturers insert a new strain in cigars to give them fragrance. The Argonaut.

THE POOR HOUSEWIFE.

And how many times do we see upon which the barest model of utility, arrangement and equipment while the house is of another generation from garret to the top of the house. The poor housewife's drudgery is the man progresses in his methods for attending to the house. The doctor acted solely in his own interest, and he sees to it that, within the limitations of his resources, he has up-to-date appliances, having in mind the woman's aspirations expand, and she knows what she ought to have, and longs for it, but she often is helpless in the presence of her husband's selfishness, deliberate or unconscious as the case may be. Woman's Love of Jewels.

Even in the Stone Age woman was fond of jewels. But it was man, the brute master, who wore them. The heavy necklace that descended upon his breast was the emblem of his superiority and power. Even before he had progressed so far as to cover himself with the skin of the stag, he wore a necklace of shells, of teeth of animals or glittering flint. The elegant dame or demoiselle who rolls by in her limousine is not so distant a relative of the cave man as she may try to appear. She likes jewels better than dress, since each season we see her more and more bejewelled and less and less clothed. The joy of jewels is of the same infancy the quality with the coquette of to-day that it was in the early barbaric times. A thread of metal, upon which are strung some shining pebbles, a thread of silk over which are placed some small round concentrations of lime, found rolling in the liquid of a diseased oyster!—L'Espresso Economique.

SUICIDES IN RUSSIA.

A special society has for some time been dealing with the question how to cope with suicides among young Russians and the famous Pirogoff society of Russian Physicians, which will shortly meet in Moscow, intends to give its particular attention to the board aspects of this sad problem. A preparatory committee appointed by the society has ascertained the following facts: In 1902 there were 23 cases of suicide in European Russia to every million inhabitants, while in 1910 the number had risen to 35. That a real epidemic of suicide is raging among the younger generation is proved by the fact that while in 1901 there were 24 cases of suicide recorded among pupils and students of 12 public schools under the ministry of education, the figure rose to 256 for 1911. It need scarcely be stated that suicide epidemics find a specially fertile soil in the Russian prisons, where the number of suicides increased 14 fold between 1900 and 1910.—Darkest Russia.

Making Houses in Moulds.

The idea of pouring the whole, or nearly the whole of a concrete house at a single operation in a matter which has engaged the attention of Edison and others. Recently, said Cassier's Monthly, a couple of engineers experimented in the United States along this line, but, because of lack of encouragement transferred their activities to Europe, where they have apparently been meeting with success. One hundred and twenty houses are said to be now in process of construction at Salindig, in the south of France. From figures given in Concrete-Cement Age for May, 1913, it seems that these houses are built under contract for $150 each, or about 25 per cent. less than a similar house of stone or brick. The windows and door frames and the sills for roof and floors are cast in advance, as are also any steps. These elements are placed in position at the time the moulds for the walls are set up. By this procedure the concrete is eliminated. The various floor and roof sections corresponding to the inner and the outer walls are held in fixed position by means of a tape bolt. These bolts also serve to hold the reinforcement in position. When the moulds are taken off the remains but 10 per cent. of the structure to be completed. The concrete must flow with more than ordinary fluidity, a certain percentage of clay is dissolved in the water used for the concrete, the precise amount being determined by a hydrometer.—Exchange.

Best Thing Known To Cure Sore Throat

"When I came home last evening," writes Mr. Thomas E. Jarvis, "I was all used up with cold and a racking cough. I felt sick all over. My wife rubbed my throat and chest every hour, and made me gargle with Neriline and water. I was soon warmed up and made comfortable with the Neriline, and the chilly sensation passed away. At 11 o'clock, after five hours' treatment, I was practically well. I therefore write you at once in order that it may be publicly known that Neriline will knock out a bad cold over night."

It is a fact that Neriline will ease up a tight chest, will relieve that sore, wheezy feeling, will knock out a cold in just a few hours. It penetrates deeply, draws out the congestion, cures promptly. Get a large family size bottle, 50c; small size, 25c., at all storeskeepers and druggists or The Catarrhose Co., Buffalo, N.Y.

Big Mammoth in Museum.

Count Steinbock Fernor, of the island of Great Lyakovsky, New Siberia, has presented to the natural history museum in Paris what is considered to be the finest specimen of a mammoth yet found. The gift is especially interesting because the animal had not finished digesting his last meal at the moment of his death, countless centuries ago. Thus the savant are for the first time able to study accurately the nature of the flora of the far-distant epoch. They have simply to examine the contents in an absolutely complete condition in a strata of ice. The skin, which is without a scratch, is covered with reddish hair, thick and soft to the touch of the Sat of a lamb. The body was cut carefully into pieces, each one labelled, and then carried 1,500 miles to a railway line on dog sledges.—Brooklyn Eagle.

Gave the Lecture, Though.

Sir Ernest Shackleton, the Antarctic explorer, tells some amusing stories of his experiences as a lecturer.

On one occasion he was giving a lecture at Leith, in Scotland, and he had paid 45 for the hall and 41 for 200 advertising. Other expenses amounted to another pound. He drove from Edinburgh to the hall and instructed the cabman to wait for him. In the building he found an audience consisting of an old, decrepit looking man, two men and a couple of children. Anxious to increase the number of his auditors, he went down to the cabman and said: "I will pay for somebody to hold the horse, and you can come up and hear the lecture." The man at once replied, "Oh, no, thank you, sir, I am all right where I am." The lecture was, however, given to the latter end, and at the close there were 25 people present. Next day he was sorrowfully recognizing his experiences to his wife and calculating his losses.

THE GOOD OLD DAYS.

(Toronto Star) In the early days of the French regime in Canada under seigneurial tenure, the inhabitants rented the lands they occupied.
