The Methodist church, River road, Raleigh, had a lovely day for their Raleigh, had a lovely day for their anniversary and harvest home services yesterday. Rev. Dr. Hannon preached in the morning a sermon which made a deep impression on the congregation. Warren Martin interested the young people in their Sunday school with a blackboard temperance tecture in the afternoon and Dr. Thornton was greeted with and Or. Thornton was greeted with an overflowing house at night. This church is in good working order and some loving hearts and hands went to a great deal of trouble in decoto a great deal of trouble in deco-rating it with all the flowers, fruits and foliage, which this section of our county is famous for. This evening the anniversary services will wind up with the usual festival which always proves so successful. Rev. I. Oster-hout, B. A., is to be congratulated on the good work going on under his pastorate at the "little church round the corner."

Standing Treat.

One of the most absurd of all foolish customs is that of inviting a crowd of friends or strangers to walk up to the bar and "take something at my expense Men do not buy other things, either useful or ornamental, in this way - why should they make an exception of this poisonous draught, which is the cause of most of the crimes which curse the land, and which fills, the community with poverty, mourning

Some one has sensibly said: 'Now, boys, if you want to be generous and treat each other, why not select some other place besides the liquor shop? Suppose as you go by the postoffice you remark, 'I say, my dear fellow, come in and take some stamps!' These stamps will cost you no more than drinks atl round. Or go to the haterdasher's and say, "Boys, come in and take a box of collars." Walk up to the grocer's, free and generous, and say, 'What kind of coffee will you have?' Why not treat to groceries by the pound as well as liquors

This would be thought a strange way of showing friendship, but would it not be tetter than to offer to friends a maddening, poisonous, dead ly draught? Suppose a man should keep a den of rattlesnakes, and allow men to come and be bitten at sixpence bite. Would it be a sensible thing for a man to invite all his friends in to be bitten at his expense? Is it worth our while to turn our friends into brutes, maniacs, and murderers, and their homes into hells of trouble and distress, by giving them "something to drink at my expense?"

Pungent Odors for Insects.

Most insects have a strong dislike for pungent odors. Ants can be kept away from the pantry often by spreading mint leaves about, and it is rarely that they or any other insect will bother the spice boxes or cabinet. This knowledge of their weakness should be utilized in a number of ways in the household. It has been found that even moths dislike a pungent odor. It is the odor of the camphor balls that keeps them from the clothes packed away for summer wear; and it is the odor of the cedar wood that makes them avoid chests and trunks of this ma-terial. The ordinary odor of cinnamon, cloves, ginger and orris root will also repei them, and if one also repel them, and if one mixes these ingredients and sprinkles them in with the clothes in summe little trouble will be experienced from moths. This mixture is superior to the camphor balls because of the less disagreeable odor which attaches to the clothes after being packed away for a time. Temperance Jots. Many a man has lost his sight by
