Tale of The Press Censor.

MR. A. G. HALES, the war correspondent, tells a funny story about a press censor in the second number of the "Week-End." We had some fun, he says, with some of those haughty gentlemen of the press gag. I was working part of the time with a correspondent who had two faults: firstly, he wrote a hand that no one but a telegraph clerk or a compositor could decipher; secondly, he stuttered when he talked, so that no one but an archangel could understand him when excited. We struck a most imperious censor, who was so well informed that I doubt if he could read cold print without assistance. My friend took up his "copy." It was an awful hand. If be had written it with the butt-end of a Blucher boot I don't think it could have been worse. The censor looked at it and handed it back. "Can't send messages in cypher," he said. "That ain't cyp-p-p-pher, it's pla-a-a-ain Engretorted the correspondent "Well, then, if that is plain English, just you read it out for me, for I'm blanked if I can read it," said the cen-

So the correspondent commenced to read. He stuttered and stammered through half of it; then the censor stopped him. "Halt," he cried; "you write as if you were an india-rubber idol, but you talk ten times worse than you write. Give it to me; I'll sign it. No operator on earth can read it." But the operator could and did, and my the food consumed. If the stomach friend got off the smartest bit of news that had left the front for many a day. However, when the censor found out what he had been induced to sign he evened matters up by sending the correspondent after his "cable" as far as Cape Town, where he is to this day. It is good fun to get him to talk about that censor; he gets so wild and stutters so much that he has to finish his strengthens the stomach, nourishes the nerves, enriches the blood and his fingers. story in deaf and dumb language on Working Himself Cut of a Job.

A collector of bad accounts received a lesson from a delinquent debtor a few days ago that has started him to thinking a bit. The collector had been chasing this delinquent for about six months and had become tired of "Call to-morrow," "I haven't it just now," and other excuses of a similar dilatory nature, and thought it was time to become "sassy."
"See here," he said, the last time he called, "are you ever going to pay this "Why, yes," replied the delinquent, "I suppose I will pay it some day or mosquitoes—so badly that I thought I would be disfigured for a couple of other. But look here yourself, young man; I think I can show you a thing or two. How many bills have you in ment to allay the irritation, and did that bundle?"

"Oh, it would, would it? What would you do for a living if everybody paid promptly?" The collector turned the thought over in his mind for a moment or two, and looked blank.

"Gracious!" he said, "I'd be out of a fob!" "That's exactly my point. Don't, therefore, be so infernally anxious to collect every cent due to your people at one time. A few collections a day are enough. As for my account, come around some day next week, and I may help you out of business by paying it. Good-day."

John Napoleon Bonaparte Little, one of Wheeling's best-known characters, is dead. He was born in Pennsylvania sixty years ago. He went to Wheeling. Va., when a small boy, and has been a resident ever since, except the time he spent in the Union army during the late war. He was known far and wide as the proprietor of "Pa" Little's celebrated

Philadelphia cream pop. One of his great fakes was a corn lotion. Twenty years ago he advertised that on a certain Sunday afternoon he would leap from the suspension bridge into the Ohio River, eighty feet below. The whole town turned out, and excursions were run by boat and rail for fifty miles. Little's cream pop and confectionery store was at the bridge entrance, and he kept seven clerks going all that day. When the hour arrived, "Pa" appeared wrapped in a flag, and announced that he had decided to postpone the jump till the river rose to within three feet of the bottom of the bridge. He cleared nearly $1,000 on the deal. Another time he advertised that he would make a balloon ascension from the front of his store. This drew as big a crowd, and when the time came make much rustle, but they do the he appeared with a huge paper balloon, fired it and balanced himself in the seat, but it would not rise. He used many other dodges to advertise himself can't be cured. Take Hood's Sarsaand business, and all were successful. His wife, who was equally adept in helping along business, died a year ago. He leaves no relatives, and the G.A.R. post attended to his funeral. New York "Journal."

Curious Bits of News.

Electric lamps are to be substituted in the place of gas jets in Westminster Abbey. It is averred that gas has proved injurious to the great church by setting up chemical change in the limestone of which its walls, arches, vaults and carvings are composed, thus hastening the disintegration of the building. Captain K. A. Jansen of Chicago has won the distinction of being the first mariner to guide a steamship from Lake Michigan to San Francisco by way of the Straits of Magellan. The craft in which he made the voyage in ninety-eight days is the steamer "Tampico," which was built at Toledo in 1900 for the Great Lakes carrying trade.

According to "Engineering," the net result in respect of speed in navigation is that while ten years ago the highest sustained ocean speed was 20.7 knots, it is now 23.51 knots; the highest speed for large warships was 22 knots, and is now 23 knots on a trial of couble the duration of those of ten years ago; the maximum speed attained by any craft was 25 knots, as compared with 36.581 knots now; while the number of ships of over 20 knots was eight in 1891, and is fifty-eight now.

When the King was Prince of Wales he refused to attend public banquets if the press were not seated among the guests. On one occasion the reporters were to dine by themselves in another room. They refused, and brought the matter under the notice of he Prince personally. He sent for the mayor of the town and made a few pointed remarks. When the banquet commenced the reporters were accommodated with seats from which they could have shaken hands with His Royal Highness.

During the past four years the United States Fish Commission has made important experiments at the station in Duluth. They have resulted in the successful planting and acclimatization in Lake Superior of the famous steelhead salmon of the Pacific, a salt-water fish exclusively heretofore. It was believed that this fish would thrive in the cold, fresh waters of Lake Superior, where so many other salmonidae grow. Several thousand fry were planted on the north shore of the lake, near Port Arthur, and at Silver Islet, both points on the Canadian side. The following year a larger number was planted off Isle Royale, and since then the planting has been kept up. Now, from time to time, the catch of an occasional steelhead is reported, and from the size of those found it is evident that they are growing about a pound a year in these fresh waters. It is also evident, from certain modifications of some of those specimens caught, that they have been propagating and increasing naturally.

Language in a Dog's Tail.

In the case of all hunting dogs, such as foxhounds or wolves, which pack together, the tail is carried aloft, and is very free in movement. It is also frequently rendered more conspicuous by the tip being white, and this is almost invariably the case when the hounds are of mixed color. When ranging the long grass of the prairie or jungle, the raised tips of the tails would often be all that an individual member of the band would see of its fellows. There is no doubt that hounds habitually watch the tails of those in front of them when drawing a covert. If a faint drag is detected suggestive of the presence of a fox, but scarcely sufficient to be sworn to vocally, the tail of the finder is at once set in motion, and the warmer the scent the quicker does it wag. Others, seeing the signal, quickly join the first, and there is an assemblage of waving tails before even the least whimper is heard Should the drag prove a doubtful one, the hounds separate again, and the waving ceases; but, if it grows stronger when followed up, the wagging becomes more and more emphatic, until one after another the hounds begin to whine and give tongue, and stream off in Indian file along the line of scent. When the pack is in full cry upon a strong scent, the tails cease to wave, but are carried aloft in full view. The moment when the dog most enjoy life is the moment when he sights game. That moment is the time when he wags his tail most vigorously in order to announce his discovery to his fellow-dogs. In this way, by the habit of association, he got to wagging his tail whenever he was pleased; and the more pleased he is the more vigorously he wags his tail, so that the wagging of a dog's tail under pleasurable emo tion can be traced directly to the time when the dog used his tail as a signal of the discovery of his prey.

Mme. Eames's Diplomacy.

Many think that musical artists should present their services for concerts given for charitable objects, says the Philadelphia "Post." Mme. Eames is also of this opinion, but she recently, in London, put the matter in a new light to those who invited her to appear gratuitously. Mme. Eames was one afternoon at Lord Charles Beresford's, and the next day received a letter from Lady Beresford saying that two ladies present had wanted to ask a favor, but in her presence had lost courage. "But I am not afraid of you," wrote Lady Beresford, and proceeded to say that the ladies in question, who happened to be extremely wealthy, wished her to sing for nothing for a certain charity. Mme. Eames immediately sat down and wrote a reply. It was her duty, she said, to save herself as much as possible for her operatic performances at Covent Garden, which were stipulated by contract to be two days apart so that she might give her freshest and best to the public. She felt, however, greatly attracted toward the charity named, and would make only one condition regarding the donating of her services. She had received 300 guineas (about $1,500) for singing at Mr. W. W. Astor's and about the same amount at other private concerts. She would gladly sing for nothing at the charity concert if each one of the la-dies interested, who had so kindly asked her, would donate 300 guineas to the object for which the concert was to be given.

As yet no replies from "the ladies interested" have been received. But Lady Beresford, not being one of the "interested ladies," appreciates more fully the .umor of the situation.

LAZY AND COLD BLOODED.

An Incident That Nearly Cost Sir Hugh Rose His Peerage.

Lord Strathnairn was the most indolent, lackadaisical, languid person who ever dawdled along Piccadilly. When be was devastating central India and winning the splendid victories that immortalized his name, he was so lazy that he could not be got to dictate the dispatches recording his own triumphs. Months elapsed before these documents could be extracted from him, and then they were brief and meager to the last degree. One day when Sir Hugh Rose he was entertaining a gallant company at dinner during the crisis of the mu-

With the utmost sang troid he was delighting those near him with one of his best anecdotes. In the middle of it his orderly entered and after saluting exclaimed, "We have captured 200 rebels, sir." To him the general turned and, with that elegant courtesy of manner on which he prided himself, serenely replied, "Thank you, sergeant." But the man still remained. Again interrupting his chief, he said, "But what are we to do with them,

"Oh." replied Sir Hugh, with a soft smile, "hang them, of course." And he resumed his anecdote. In a little while Sir Hugh was again interrupted in the middle of another story by the sergeant, who came in and said, "Please, sir, we've hung the lot, sir." The general turned, bowed slightly and in the sweetest manner lisped, "Thanks, sergeant-very many thanks," and then went on with his anecdote as if nothing had happened. This story came to the ears of Queen Victoria, and she was so angry that it nearly cost Sir Hugh his peerage.

David's Line. When David Belasco and H. C. De Mille wrote "The Charity Ball," there was a speech in it that did not please Herbert Kelcey, leading man of the company. The words Kelcey objected to were quoted from one of David's psalms.

Ignorant of its origin, Kelcey said to Mr. De Mille:

"I don't like that line. It's bombastic and old fashioned." "The line is not mine, but David's," replied De Mille, referring of course to the psalmist. "I thought so!" cried Kelcey triumphantly. "I'd recognize David Belas;
