TRINITY.

Amongst the changes for the better that have come to us, more or less, in many things, all along the line, are those in connection with funerals, and the outward expressions of the sorrow that wells up from the heart, at the time, and after we have laid the body of some loved one to rest in God's Acre. Fifty years ago the coffins of all but those of children were covered with black; long black mournings were worn on the hats; house blinds were kept down for weeks, and sometimes for months, to the detriment of the health of the living. Less than twenty-five years ago it was the custom in a fishing village not far from Trinity, for every body who had worn a mourning at a funeral during the week to wear it to church on the following Sunday. All who wore the mournings sat in the front seats, took no part in the service, but with bowed heads and audible moans, they performed that which a heathen custom demanded of them. Whilst white bands to be worn on the arm, are still sent to those who have been chosen to be responsible for the care of the body from the house to the grave, fifty years ago it was the custom to send long black hat mournings to all the leading people of the town. This constituted an invitation to attend the funeral, and the invitation was always accepted. To overlook the sending of such an invitation, was regarded as a personal slight, and in one instance where it was overlooked, the man attended the funeral, (which was on a broiling hot day) not dressed in frock coat and bowler hat, but in his "monkey-jacket" black, whilst those of the younger people, as well as those of children are covered with white. The long black hat bands of the men have all but disappeared, whilst the black crepe veils of the women are never used, except it be

As a sequel to the story of Jimmy Hogarth's search for the gimlet, a relative has told me (since I wrote that story) that whilst it is true that Jimmy never talked whilst he worked, yet he worked hard whilst he talked. One fine evening he went to Ship Cove, to visit an old friend who was a well known talker on all occasions, they had not spent an evening together for a long time. So they talked, and talked till 12 o'clock; sometimes they talked one at a time and sometimes they talked both together. Then, although it was time for Jimmy to start for home, they had not half finished their talk. The friend decided to accompany Jimmy part of the way home, and to finish their talk on the road. So they walked

When Choosing the Material for a washable Frock for the growing child—

MOTHER naturally thinks of the possibilities of the fabric shrinking in the wash. It is therefore a relief to her to know that the fabric will not shrink or lose its charm if Lux is used for its cleansing.

Durability, charm of colour, quality of texture, the freshness of newness—these are preserved to all good fabrics washed with Lux. A packet of Lux—a bowl of warm water—and dainty hands can cleanse delightful fabrics in a delightfully easy manner.

The beautiful pure Lux flakes are whisked into a creamy, bubbly lather in an instant. Gently squeeze this cleansing foam through and through the soiled texture—then rinse in clean water and hang to dry. Lux cannot harm a silken thread, it comes rather than forces the dirt from the clothes.

Packets (two sizes) may be obtained everywhere.

ed and talked, and talked and walked, till they found themselves at Jimmy's front gate, with the story still unfinished. Then Jimmy suggested that he go back just a little way with his friend, and the first thing they knew was—they were both back to the friend's house again, at Ship Cove. There was no one to keep "tally" of the number of times they walked to and fro between North Side and Ship Cove; but it is said that they spent most of the night at it—and no one knows whether they talked, all they had to talk about or not. It is supposed they did not.

An old man of my boyhood days in Trinity, used to put the family molasses-keg on his shoulder once a fortnight, and take it down to Brookings to be filled. He would leave it with my father, who was the store-keeper, and whilst father was filling it, the old man would walk back to his house for the wheelbarrow to take the keg home in.

Marriages that began the perpetuation of some of our well known present names in Trinity and other places:

Ploughman, 1814. John Ploughman, of the Parish of Hinton, in the County of Dorset, England, married to Charity Foster, widow of William Foster, Ship Cove.

Bellows, 1808. Thomas Bellows, of Dorset, England, married to Elizabeth Tavernor, Trinity.

Lander, 1805. Captain William Lander, of the brig "Hope," daughter of Joseph and Elizabeth Moore, of Trinity.

Warr, 1802. William Warr, of Dorset, England, married to Sarah, daughter of Samuel and Christiana Savary, of Old Perlican.

Breddy, 1801. Captain James Breddy, of Poole, England, married to Mary, daughter of Edward and Patience Rowe, of Trinity.

Finch, 1798. Samuel Finch, of Dartmouth, England, married to Elizabeth Percy, of Old Perlican.

Didham, 1795. Samuel Didham, of Devon, England, married to Elizabeth Busey, of Trinity.

Dr. Cross, of Brooklyn, was in town on Tuesday last. Glad to see him.

Mrs. Aubrey Crocker gave a birthday party on Saturday evening last.

Mr. Fred Morris paid a business visit to St. John's last week.

Miss Cecily Oakley and Mrs. and Miss Connolly were passengers by the Prospero for St. John's.

The wife of Mr. Allan Penney, of English Harbor, has presented him with triplets; all girls, and all doing well.

Miss Grant left last week for Twillingate, to spend the Summer with her sister Mrs. Hunt, at the Church of England Parsonage.

The evenings at Trinity have been exceptionally beautiful of late, and thoroughly enjoyed by all. Won't you come and enjoy them?

Miss Abbott, of Grand Falls, who has been staying at Garland Hotel, left by the "Malakoff" for Hillview, S. W. Arm, Random, to spend a few weeks with friends there.

Mrs. Lahey was a passenger by the Prospero to St. John's. She has gone to meet her husband, Capt. Lahey, who is now due at St. John's from a foreign port.

Several of our people are vying with each other in the use of lime on fences and outbuildings, and the results are healthful and respectable. Keep it up. It indicates loyalty and good taste.

Mr. Karl S. Trappell, Optician; Newfoundland's Eyesight Specialist, is in town (15th line) for a few days and may be consulted in the Guild Room of the Parish Hall. This is his first visit to Trinity, and he is registered at Garland Hotel. Glad to see him.

Glencove, one of the beauty spots of Trinity, is very beautiful this year. The water is cold for bathing just yet, but it will be all right soon. It will always be associated in our minds with Doctor and Mrs. Barlow who appreciated and enjoyed its beauties.

"Mayor" Crocker is making a decided improvement in connection with his property opposite the Mortuary Chapel. He has taken away the inartistic and dangerous barbed wire fence, and is replacing it with a neat and artistic paling fence. When this is finished, and given a coat of lime, the property will look as though it belonged to somebody.

Mr. Walter Bugden, of Petley, came to Trinity from Catalina on Sunday last. He had then visited and officially inspected the Church of England Schools in Bonavista Bay and Catalina, and he has now done the same in connection with the Church Schools in Trinity Bight. He registered at Garland Hotel, and his old friends were glad to see him.

Rev. Canon Field has been spending a quiet and enjoyable holiday in the parish of Trinity East, as the welcome guest of old friends—Dr. and Mrs. Fitzgerald. Canon Field gave many years of hard and unselfish service in this parish, which—extended from Freshwater to English Harbor; and all are glad to see him again in his midst.

Will the person who sent me a copy of Services, etc. of Trinity Church, Boston, from Hotel Oxford, Copley Square, Boston, and signed, "From an Evening Telegram Reader" kindly accept my thanks for the same. Reading between the lines, I conclude that he is a reader of my Trinity Notes. He is but one of many who have been kind enough to assure me of their appreciation of my efforts to keep Trinity in the limelight, and I am thereby encouraged, and I am grateful. Won't you kindly drop me a card, and reveal your identity?

Trinity, June 18th. —W.J.L.
