REBECCA.

A Jewish maid who came at even- tide. Bringing her pitcher with her, and well knowing that she was to be her guide. How one was waiting there to be her guide. To a strange country. Life untried. Where, at home and kindred, she would dwell.

Leaving all gladly, wrapped as in a spell. To follow him, and where he lived, abide. Ah, so while waiting some familiar way. Bearing the burden that with all are rife. There comes to each a strange, grand, solemn day.

That finds love waiting by the well of life. Love a strong, healthy man, no winged fay. Who takes our fate and molds it; vain were strife!

THE ANGEL OF DEATH.

The quality of his voice first attracted my attention, although with it came the uncomfortable sensation that I had been stolen upon unawares. I think, sir, you will find a seat over there by the window preferable to this.

At all times given to be slightly nervous, I positively jumped at being thus spoken to. First, I say, because of the quality of his voice. It was heavy and deep, like one of the bourdon pipes of an organ, and was of such volume and vibrating power that it sounded painfully in my ears. Then, too, there was the suddenness.

I turned quickly, and then it was his appearance that elicited all preceding sensation. He was unusually tall, of massive though angular frame, but it was his face that was the point of attraction. Upon that face of peculiar breadth and consummate symmetry, was set a head of small proportions, the features were grotesquely disproportioned, the eyes, of a pale blue as to be almost colorless, equipped with a wide, almost comical, smile. The mouth was like an eagle's beak. The nose was extensive and ragged in outline, while the ears stuck out like the handles of an antique vase.

I use I have used the word "grotesque" in attempting to describe the man's appearance. This is wrong, for I rather should have said appalling, and as I look at him, I found myself wondering how the shrewd manager of the San Juan Capistrano, could have engaged so repulsive a creature, who had many days passed, however, I before many days had passed, however, I found that his service was nearly perfect, and that behind that distressing mask there lay an intelligence of a peculiarly high order.

"I am the son of an English clergyman," he told me one day. I had spilled the salt, and as I did so, he said, "Dear me, that makes a little over your left shoulder and say Abraham."

"Where in the world did you hear that conjunction?"

"In the 'Iniquity Legends,' as well as I can remember," he answered, and then came a conversation on reading—for I am not exclusive—out of which grew the remark about his being the son of an English clergyman.

"I know, of course," he said in that great bellow of his, "that there is a fine regulation favor in this—still it's true. It is also true, sir, that you will find my name on the books at the Brazenose College, Oxford."

"Well, then, my good fellow," I replied, "what in the name of all that's unpleasant brings you here?"

"Drink," was the laconic reply.

"Ah, the old story," I said.

"No, by no means the old story."

"What, then?" I persisted.

"Don't ask me, please," he pleaded, and in the mirror, which was at the foot of the table, I saw that his eyes were drawn down as if in pain, and that his huge mouth was all of a tremble.

I was interested. I must confess, but I was also a little chagrined to think I might be allowing a smart impostor to play upon my feelings. I therefore shrugged my shoulders. He was quick to read the sign.

"I am attempting to excuse myself," he said, "but I think I am imposing upon you, sir," he said, "let me come to your room this evening, and I will be able to explain myself more fully."

I hesitated a moment and then consented.

I was sitting out on the balcony smoking a cigar, listening to the heavy wash of the Pacific on the sands and watching the fog-bank slowly settling down over the Loma. When he rapped at my door, I was startled. He asked permission to come in. He asked permission to sit on the sofa. He asked permission to bring another chair outside my window, and having lit a cigar, he spoke as follows:

"I need not go over the story of who I am, or tell you my real name. It will be enough to assure you that I am an English gentleman, born and bred, and to repeat that I own my present debased condition to a few drops of the devil's blood, and to a few drops of the devil's blood, and to a few drops of the devil's blood."

Yet I am not a drunkard by choice, or by vicious inclination, but one made so by hideous fate. Don't smile, sir, for it's the truth that I am telling you. I was not always the abominable-looking creature I am now. Up to my 25th year I had never tasted spirits, and was a gentleman, born and bred, and to repeat that I own my present debased condition to a few drops of the devil's blood, and to a few drops of the devil's blood, and to a few drops of the devil's blood."

The intelligence of animals became one of the subjects of discussion at a little dinner party. An enthusiastic advocate of the dog was asked: Do you mean to tell us that there are some dogs with more sense than their masters can boast of? "Certainly I have one."

Carter's Little Liver Pills must not be confused with common Cathartic or Purgative Pills as they are entirely unlike them in every respect. One trial will prove much worse the day after he has had an hour's sleep on account of the baby than he does the day after he has lost five hours' sleep at night.

A man's wife should always be the same especially to her husband, but if she is a nervous and was Carter's Little Liver Pills cannot be for, at least so they say, as their husbands say so. They were guessing each other's ages. "You're about 18," said one. "To judge by your immature and amateur jokes, you're about 18," replied the other. "To judge by your antique and mossy Bill," said the third. "To judge by your antique and mossy Bill," said the third.

In fruits, in crops, in springs that flow, All giving life, in them we see The hand flowing mercy Deity.

From birth to manhood we increase in bulk and weight. After that the repeating process goes on; living tissues are steadily broken down. The waste if not carried off and constantly replaced with proper elements, the body suffers, sickens, down, down. Vitality so lowered may drop into a premature grave. Among the discoveries of the age nature towers over all. A mineral spring is found containing all the elements of the body. This water—the famed St. Leon—effects such marvellous cures that its name is spreading to all quarters. The ablest physicians are lost in wonder, and pronounce it "a miracle of healing power, unequalled." Few know health such as St. Leon brings. It is safe, certain, its duplex action unites. It expels the most deadly poisons. And all along through the building, bracing, regulating organism last. After a use the wasted organism assumes its summer bloom. A fresh charm to life never before experienced. Further to the water, and continue until the system is built up with nature's pure elements that nourish the vital forces, regulate and tone the mechanism of life, the tear, wear and worry of life may be overcome with these buoyant feelings perfect health alone can maintain.

Keep It Up, Gentlemen. It Does Us Good. Figures Won't Lie!

Notwithstanding the combined efforts of jealous rivals to put us under, we are out on top as usual. Look at the record for 1903. Policies issued for nearly $5,000,000. Not bad for a young company, you will say. True, it took some of the old fogies 10 years to write up the record of 1903. We are writing up more applications last year than some of the other companies in the control of the Company's affairs and to monopolize nine-tenths of the profits of the business. Each policy-holder has one vote for every $1,000 of insurance held by him in this Company. These privileges are secured by the act of incorporation. If you are not insured, or want more insurance, take a policy in the MANUFACTURERS' Fidelity and Guaranty Co. of New York. Our premium plans are as low as any other company. We decline to pay death or maturity benefits as the case may be. The policy-holder is entirely free from all liability, but are, nevertheless, allowed to participate in the control of the Company's affairs and to monopolize nine-tenths of the profits of the business.
