Christmas Dinner for 1,000

The Salvation Army in the city are arranging this year to give a Christmas dinner to a thousand people. The officers in going around visiting among the people find there are a very great number indeed who are deprived at this festive season of the cheer and luxury that many others enjoy, and which the army officers believe many of the more fortunate citizens are anxious should be afforded them. The churches and other societies have done much in this line, but it is quite patent that there is still much undone. It is proposed to secure a large hall, where a good dinner will be given to all who come. In addition, it is intended as far as means will allow to send out baskets to every possible needy home in the city. For this worthy object Major McMillan makes an appeal to all who are interested, and can subscribe to this fund. It is hoped that a good response will be forthcoming. Checks can be made payable to Major Alexander McMillan, London.

—Mr. Walter Hull and wife, of Sacramento, Cal., are paying a visit to the former's father, Mr. John D. Hull, of Delaware.

KEEN COLLEGE MEN

The Food of Harvard Brain Workers and Athletes.

Memorial Hall at Harvard where some twelve hundred of the men eat, is particularly interesting. The dining-room is an enormous gothic hall finished in old English oak with wide stained-glass windows on the sides. The walls are hung with portraits of illustrious graduates and benefactors of past generations.
The students have good food to eat and plenty of it. The hall is run on a co-operative plan so that it costs something less than four dollars a week for board. To this place three times a day come men, whose lives for the time being are given to serious intellectual work, and to accomplish this, they are keen enough to realize that proper food is absolutely necessary.

One is particularly struck by the yellow packages of Grape-Nuts standing on nearly every table, which the men purchase at grocery stores and bring in for their personal use. They quickly find, out by practical demonstration that brain work exhausts the phosphates, and that nature demands that this loss be made up, and made up from food.
Grape-Nuts is ready to be used without cooking. It is a scientific food which nourishes and builds up the brain, and is particularly suited to the needs of students.

The "Varsity athletes also eat it to keep their digestive organs in perfect working order so that they can stand the great strain of both body and head-work when important contests small come.

—A correspondent to The Advertiser writes: Last fall and last spring I planted what I hoped would be a fine bed of lilacs, but after they made a good start for growth, the tips of the leaves turned from a bright, healthy green to a purple-brown, which later developed into a case of genuine and very destructive rust, spoiling the plants and ruining the flowers. Will you kindly ask the learned gentlemen of the Entomological Society for a cure for this trouble? An answer in your valuable paper would greatly oblige a large number.

—The regular meeting of the W. C. T. U. was held yesterday afternoon in the Somerset Hall. After the opening exercises and discussion of general business, the devotional exercises were conducted by Rev. Mr. Scott. A very interesting Bible reading and talk was given. Reports were then read by delegates to the provincial convention of the W. C. T. U., held at Stratford. All the delegates gave a very full report of the work done at the convention, and a vote of thanks was extended to them. Mrs. Thornley spoke briefly about the general tone of the convention, and the meeting was brought to a close. The next regular meeting will be on Nov. 26, and it is hoped that there will be a full attendance.

A. O. U. W. "AT HOME."

The annual "At Home" of Electric Lodge No. 402, A. O. U. W., was held in their lodge room, Society Hall, East London, last night, and was a decided success. The spacious hall, which was gaily decorated with flags and bunting, was filled to overflowing by an appreciative audience. Addresses were given by Mr. A. C. Graham, grand organizer, Rev. S. J. Allen, of Hamilton Road Methodist Church, and Rev. T. Wilson, of King Street Presbyterian Church, and in these many strong points of the order were presented to the audience. An orchestra of ten instruments, under the able leadership of Bro. George Ackroyd, rendered a number of selections, which were greatly appreciated. Don't Die to Win.

There are many men who say they don't want life insurance because they have to "die to win." They fail to see, however, that they are making a winning card instead of a losing one. The man who dies and leaves his family in a dependent position has made a failure of life. No matter what successes he may have achieved during his lifetime.

But why not take an "Imperial Endowment Policy" from the Imperial Life Assurance Company of Canada, Toronto? You won't have to die to win then. If you survive the endowment period you receive your money back with interest, after having had the protection of life insurance during the entire term of the investment. It makes an ideal combination of investment and life insurance.

VAUDEVILLELITIGATION

Local Interest in A. J. Small's Suit Against Manager Shea.

Manager Cairns, of the Grand, Speaks of the Local Aspect of the Situation.

The public of this city and of Hamilton and Ottawa, as well as theatrical men in general in Canada and the United States, are interested in the lawsuit which has been instituted by Mr. A. J. Small, of the Grand and Toronto Opera Houses, Toronto, and Grand Opera House here, for $7,500 damages against Shea's Yonge Street Theatre Company, the claim arising out of the non-fulfillment of an agreement made between the plaintiff and defendant company, and the cancellation of a contract whereby the plaintiff was promised a high-class vaudeville bill weekly, throughout the season. The first one was put in on Sept. 30, and was a fairly good one, being accorded as much patronage as could be expected for such an innovation. The second show, a week later, was considerably below the first in point of excellence, and failed to attract the public, which was beginning to take to the vaudeville habit, and many were looking forward with interest to the third show, which included James J. Corbett, in his monologues, turn, and a better supporting bill than had yet appeared. Practically without notice, however, the attraction was cancelled, and it is only now that the public of this city learns that it was the fault of Mr. Shea, and not that of Mr. Small or the local management. Mr. Shea's faint-hearted withdrawal from his contract before the public had been given a fair chance to show their true attitude toward vaudeville is even less understandable after his expression of willingness to lose several thousand dollars in the venture of giving vaudeville a fair trial in London and the other cities named.

Mr. J. F. Cairns, the manager of the Grand Opera House here, was seen by a reporter today and asked what he could say as to the local aspect of the case. Mr. Cairns replied: "London was not treated fairly in the matter of Shea's vaudeville. The people were just beginning to understand what the vaudeville really meant, when the shows were withdrawn. Everybody wanted to see Corbett, and we could have packed the house that week, when suddenly I received word that the vaudeville contract had been broken by Mr. Shea. The whole thing put the local management in an awkward position. We had promised the public such headliners as Jessie Bartlett Davis, Eugene Cowles, James J. Corbett, and other leading vaudeville people, but as a matter of fact London was not given these or any other headliners, and so was given no chance to show its appreciation. I myself did more to book the Shea show than any other attraction we had booked. The best people were beginning to realize that it was quite safe to come and see the Shea shows. London people had shown in their attendance at the vaudeville shows at Springbank all summer that they were prepared to be generous in their patronage of the high-class article, and they should have been given a better chance to prove it than they were given."

At first slight weakness, stomach annoyance, headache, heart fluttering, trembling of the hands and limbs, restless sleep, indicate something is lacking—that something is nerve force. Until the stock of nerve force is replenished the pace of declining health will increase, until lost vitality is expressed in every move.

Pale, languid, nerve-shattered people find exactly what they require in Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. It supplies the wants of wasted nerves, rebuilds the wasted cells, and renews the blood. Its wonderful cures are due to the fact that it restores natural nerve force, and it is lack of nerve force that causes most suffering these days. Brain nerves, heart nerves, stomach nerves, give out, and all sorts of troubles follow.
Mrs. M. A. McCrea, Troy Hill, Ont., writes: "My system was all run down when I began to use Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. I was weak and very nervous, and felt so tired and worn-out that I could scarcely drag myself about the house. It seemed impossible for me to get rest or sleep at night, and I felt that I was gradually growing weaker and more nervous and irritable. Since beginning the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I feel altogether different. It has gradually strengthened my nerves and built up my system wonderfully. I sleep well now, and am being thoroughly restored to health and strength. I believe it is the best medicine to be had for the nerves."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50 cents a box, six boxes for $2.50. At all dealers, or Edmondson, Bates & Co., Toronto.
