

TORONTO FIRE RECALLED

At the Toronto fire, among the many noble warehouses burned, was that of Wyld & Darling. This firm had an enviable reputation in the wholesale drygoods world. It enjoyed the character of carrying the best class of goods that money could buy. Before the great fire they had purchased in the foreign and home markets great quantities of goods for fall delivery, but since the fire they have decided to discontinue business—consequently all the beautiful goods they bought will have to be disposed of at a great sacrifice. Our buyer heard of what was likely to happen, went to Toronto, and very fortunately got in early. The prices quoted were simply irresistible. So much for having a friend inside to give a friend outside a pointer. He bought quantities of Dress Goods, Linens, Ladies' and Children's Knit Underwear, Hosiery, Flannelettes, and many other lines of excellent merchandise needed in every home.

IRISH STUDENTS IN WILD RIOT

Nationalists Force a Way Into Conference.

POLICE ROUTED BY CROWD

Exclusion Order by the Senate of Institution Provokes Wild Disorder.

Dublin, Nov. 17.—The strained relations which have existed for some time between the senate of the Royal University of Ireland and the graduates and undergraduates culminated on Friday in an extraordinary riot in the university building and in the streets of the metropolis.

The graduates and undergraduates of the Royal University are mainly Nationalists; the senate is almost entirely unionist. At the annual conference of delegates last year an exciting scene occurred, owing to the exclusion of the senate in drafting a large force of policemen into the hall, when the students, as was their custom, chanted "God Save Ireland" at the conclusion of the proceedings, fell upon the students and assaulted them brutally.

It was anticipated that, owing to the indignation then aroused, the senate would not again exclude the nationalist graduates and undergraduates, but the action of the senate in excluding the nationalist graduates and undergraduates from the building, and the latter's reply by publishing a statement of the causes which induced the senate to thus insult them and emphatically declared that the senate had no legal or moral justification for its action.

The senate persisted in its exclusion order, and the Government placed the services of 70 picked policemen at its disposal. The graduates and undergraduates to the number of 400 assembled and marched in procession to the university building, where they found the doors locked and guarded against them. They formally demanded admission and were emphatically refused. Whereupon they hurled themselves in a body against the doors. The policemen were swept away, and after an exciting struggle the students rushed into the hall, cheering madly.

The sight of the chancellor, Lord Meath, sitting to deliver his address irritated the students who regard him as one of the chief causes of the exclusion. He was groaned vigorously, and each time he attempted to speak

MEN OF MILLIONS CHEER MORLEY

Morgan One Who Silently Received the Speech.

A CHAMPION OF FREE TRADE

More Than Four Hundred Millionaires Were Present, Representing About $2,000,000,000.

New York, Nov. 18.—John Morley, member of parliament, won the speech-making success of the night at the 13th annual banquet of the Chamber of Commerce at Delmonico's.

His speech advocated free trade. He introduced the subject with apologies. He begged his audience not to hoot him out of the hall for what he was going to say.

There were 400 men at the banquet, most of them multi-millionaires. Single-figure millionaires were comparative paupers in the company. The 400 men represented an ownership of wealth roughly estimated at $2,000,000,000.

To the surprise of Mr. Morley and many of those present his free trade utterances were vociferously applauded. When he made probably the 200,000,000th reference to a tariff for revenue only, per cent of his hearers, stamped on the floor and clapped their hands.

There were some notable exceptions. J. Pierpont Morgan, who sat at the toast table, was silent. He followed Secretary of the chamber, Mr. J. P. Morgan, who had just spoken. The man who led the applause was Andrew Carnegie, who has made probably the 200,000,000th reference to a tariff for revenue only, per cent of his hearers, stamped on the floor and clapped their hands.

Leslie M. Shaw, secretary of the treasury, made the other important speech of the evening. His utterances were looked forward to with keen interest, because of their possible effect upon Wall street and the big speculation now in progress.

Many of his hearers expected that he would say something definite upon the possibility of the Government withdrawing $200,000,000 or $250,000,000 from the national bank depositories at an early date. He did not touch upon that subject. His speech was optimistic, tinged with conservatism.

John Morley was the second speaker introduced by Morris K. Jesup, president of the chamber. He followed Secretary Shaw, and was heartily cheered when he stood up to speak. He said in part: "Now the secretary of the treasury has made you a most interesting speech; he has told you that he is reasonably optimistic; that he does not care about the doors being closed; he tells you frankly that prices are good; that hopes are buoyant and that there is no danger of any loss of poise. Yes, but then I thought to myself all the time the secretary of the treasury was speaking, if hopes in the United States are buoyant, what about hopes in the little island from which I come?"

"Now, I am, what I do not suppose anybody else is—I am a free trader. (Laughter and applause.)

"Frankly, I rejoice to hear from the secretary of the treasury that your hopes are buoyant, and that you are prosperous. Why, that is a thing that struck me most in my rapid transit through important trade centers in this country—the enormous and unbounded strength of your material resources. (Applause.)

U. S. DEMAND FOR TARIFF REVISION

Republicans in Middle West Want Reciprocity.

ORGANIZED EFFORT TO BE MADE

The President May Be Induced to Call an Extra Session to Consider the Matter.

Washington, Nov. 17.—Reports from Indiana, Illinois, Minnesota, Iowa and other Middle Western States have been received here, indicating that an organized and vigorous effort will be made during the winter to induce the President and the Republican leaders to consider the advisability of holding an extra session of Congress next spring, with a view to devising some form of reciprocity with Canada. This, at least, is the avowed purpose of the agitation that will be begun, though strong protectionists believe that the revisionists are behind the movement.

All through the Middle West, and particularly along the northern border, the markets of Canada are proving a strong attraction. An Indiana concern, manufacturing threshing machines, has arranged to build a $1,000,000 plant in Canada because it is unable to deliver its American-made machines in that market. The manufacturers of the north believe that the leaders of the new reciprocity propaganda, and have sent agents to stir up the sentiment in Iowa, Illinois, Minnesota, Michigan, besides getting into communication with the reciprocity advocates in Massachusetts.

However strong the sentiment against tariff revision among the real leaders of the Republican party in Congress, they realize that they must face a strong current setting the other way. Their hope at present is to stem the current, knowing they cannot stop it. If they can postpone revision they will be satisfied. Some of them apprehend that President Roosevelt will take it into his head to decide that the time has come for a revision of the tariff, and they know that if he does so decide, the "staid patters" will have to give way.

Such papers as the Indianapolis News, Chicago Tribune and Washington Post have already come out for early tariff revision, going to the extent of declaring that the good faith of the Republican party is pledged to a revision of the tariff. They argue that now is the time to consider a modification of tariff schedules, as the presidential election is over, the next campaign is as far off as any campaign will ever be, and the danger of disturbances as slight as can ever be expected. Out in Indiana the tariff revisionists are quoting an alleged message from the President to one of their number, in which he is reported as saying: "Tell them out there that I am with them." They quote his message of two years ago, in which he made as strong a plea for tariff revision as any Iowa idea advocate has ever made.

The Massachusetts people, too, believe they have President Roosevelt on their side in their fight for Canadian reciprocity. During the recent cam-

FOG SPOILS THE ROYAL PAGEANT

Nevertheless London Gives a Warm Welcome to the Visiting Monarchs.

London, Nov. 17.—King Charles and Queen Amelia of Portugal passed in procession through the streets of London today, and had luncheon at the Guildhall as the guests of the lord mayor and corporation.

As a pageant the royal procession through the lamp-lit streets of the city could not be regarded by even the most enthusiastic as a success. An opaque fog, which at some parts of the route was no denser than a light mist, hid more than fifty yards ahead, veiled the overhead decorations, and the troops lining the route, besides getting into communication with their bright uniforms under heavy greatcoats. The crowds were not large, but nothing was lacking in the warmth of the reception accorded to their majesties. Addresses were presented to them by the local authorities at various points along the route. One of these was typical of all. It neatly referred to Queen Amelia as follows:

"Sprung from France, born in England, wedded to Portugal, she has linked the three nations, which we trust will always be found in close association with one another."

At the Guildhall Lord Mayor Pound and the Lady Mayoress, in their corporation robes of office, awaited the visitors. A procession proceeded to the library, which was filled with cabinet ministers, peers, members of the House of Commons, officials and officers of both services, the Prince and Princess of Wales also being present. The royal party was presented to King Charles, and the presentations of officials and others to the King and Queen followed, and then the city's 800 guests, headed by the royal party, filled the large hall where the luncheon was served. The lord mayor toasted the King of Portugal, who, in reply, referred to the long-standing alliance between Great Britain and Portugal, and hoped it would continue for all time.

At the conclusion of the luncheon the royal party returned in procession to Paddington station and took a train for Windsor.

Cold in New England
Boston, Nov. 17.—A cold wave swept over Northern and Eastern New England early today, and the thermometer in Northern Vermont towns stood at zero, and in several instances lower. The temperature at Portland Me., at 8 a.m., was four degrees above zero.

DEADLY RUSS BULLET

Expert Says Those Used by Japanese Are Too Small.

San Francisco, Nov. 17.—Dr. N. Nogami, of Tokio, who has personally examined many of the Japanese and Russian wounded in the hospitals of Japan since the beginning of hostilities, is here on his way to London to publish a paper before a society of surgeons there on bullet wounds and their treatment during the present war. He expresses surprise at the way wounds inflicted by the small bullets used by the Japanese heal and the small death rate which they cause. The Russian bullet used is far more deadly, he says.
