CHINESE BOYCOTT GIGANTIC FAKE

American Labor Leaders Say It's a Conspiracy to Hit at Unions.

Washington, Aug. 9.—The national leaders of the labor organizations claim to have discovered a widespread conspiracy between capitalists in this country hostile to labor unions and certain interests in China to secure a radical change in the Chinese exclusion laws that will permit the introduction of large numbers of coolies in the United States. The labor leaders assert that the present boycott of American manufactures and products in China and other parts of the Orient is a result of this alleged conspiracy, the object being to produce a state of feeling among American manufacturers doing business in the Orient that will induce them to throw their influence in favor of a new and more liberal treaty with China and a revision of our exclusion laws that will result in the coming of large numbers of Chinese working men to this country.

It is claimed by labor leaders that as a matter of fact the boycott on American goods in China is a good deal of a fake. They say it is largely put forth by agents of the Chinese exclusion laws and the capitalists in this country who wish to break down the barriers erected against the influx of coolie labor into the United States. The labor leaders are about to begin an agitation in all parts of the country for the purpose of arousing opinion to have discovered, Samuel Gompers, president of the Federation of Labor, is to take the lead in the agitation. He will soon start on a tour of the country with this object in view, and expects to stir up labor unionists and the laboring classes generally that the alleged conspiracy will be defeated.

FIRST MEETING OF PEACE ENVOYS

Komura Left Credentials Behind But Witte Believes Them To Be O. K.

Portsmouth, Aug. 9.—The first meeting of the plenipotentiaries today was of an entirely informal character. In fact, Baron Komura did not bring his letter of credence to the Portsmouth navy yard, whereas M. Witte was armed with the original document in Russian, setting forth the powers conferred upon him, and also with a translation of the documents.

The latter he read. Baron Komura was embarrassed and offered to send back to the hotel for his commission, but M. Witte expressed his faith that the credentials were full and ample. Later in the afternoon copies of the credentials were informally exchanged. The French text, however, differs slightly, in exactly what respect could not be ascertained tonight, but the Associated Press is assured, both by the Japanese and Russian emissaries, that the difference is not essential and constitutes no obstacle to the official opening of negotiations.

Indeed, President Roosevelt was informed officially tonight that the credentials were full, ample and satisfactory to both sides. It was decided today to hold two daily sessions, at 9:30 a.m. and 3 p.m. There are facilities for each side will be in attendance to draw up the protocols of the meetings, which will be written both in English and French. The French text, however, in case of dispute, will be accepted in evidence. The official version of today's meeting given out by each side described the exchange of credentials and other accounts of the negotiations. It indicates that, while everything passed off amicably, considerable reserve was displayed on both sides.

HALF HOLIDAY WELL OBSERVED

Official London and Half Business and Manufacturing Concerns Honored It.

Official London, as well as half of the business houses and factories, and nearly all citizens, honored the half-holiday declared by the council for military day of the Old Boys' reunion. Quite a few stores were open and quite a few were closed, but as every day this week has been a holiday, it is very difficult to distinguish the crowds on the streets of any one day from another.

The visitors and their friends continued the merry-making with a zest as undiminished as when they overflowed with enthusiasm on Monday. There appears to be no let-up to the fun this week. Out at Queen's Park, 10,000 people saw the military sports. At Victoria Park a couple of thousand heard the splendid band of the First Regiment, Chicago, render a choice programme in the afternoon, when several thousand people also took in the beauties of Springfield. At night, Springfield Park was again given by a vast throng, and the concert given in Victoria Park by the Seventh Band, was liberally patronized.

Down town the largest crowd of the week paraded the streets, and the street fair did a land office business. Some of the shows found it impossible to go on for a while, as the jostling crowds carried the doorkeepers away from their positions and hundreds entered the tents without paying. As might be expected the great rush was at the Streets of Cairo.

The crowds on the streets about 8 o'clock had a jolly sight. It was no less than "Barney" McCann, the kingpin of the Old Boys' reunion, riding a camel with his noted lieutenant and bosom friend, "Billy" Ward. On another camel came "Jack" Minihnick, who complained bitterly to the Mohammedan leading the ship of the desert that he was being rocked until he was feeling sick.

A spectator asked Mr. McCann at the corner of King and Richmond streets if he was aware a camel could go without a drink for seven days. "I never heard of it," said Barney, "but if it's true I don't want to be a camel."

Up and down Dundas street Mr. McCann and Mr. Ward rode in state, with Mr. Minihnick a close second on Humpy No. 2. Then the men on the front camel got into an argument as to why a camel carries two humps, and a policeman was compelled to borrow a step-ladder and go up to settle the row.

Mr. McCann's argument was that one hump would have done just as well as that was all he needed to hold by, but Mr. Ward upheld the principles of nature, and with heated dignity argued that one good hump deserves another. The policeman "batted" in at this time, and Mr. McCann, losing his head, attempted to pull off one of the humps and throw it at the officer. Chief Williams was sent for and he soon settled the trouble by threatening to beat both belligerents with a stick with a twist in it if they did not behave. Then the procession resumed its march on the march on the Streets of Cairo, where the company was unaided after much difficulty. The camel re-united half a dozen keepers kicked his "camel," not Mr. McCann's—lost from under him.

An effort was made to have the Chicago Band remain over on the scene in aid of the first-aiders. All of the scene in made the distance in five minutes, and the South Londoners in six minutes.

Yesterday afternoon the firemen were called out by Chairman Matthews, of the semi-centennial committee, in order to allow a number of visitors to see the department on a run. All three stations responded and pulled up at Kingston street. The chief was warmly complimented on the fast time made and also on the general efficiency of the fire-fighters. The fire engine station apparatus was on the scene in two minutes. The East London men made the distance in five minutes, and the South Londoners in six minutes.

the official programme as the "Officers' Powder Race." Everyone had been wondering what on earth it could be. When five elderly "ladies" attired in print dresses and wearing most fantastic headgear, appeared on the track, and lined up for a 100-yard dash, you would scarcely recognize five of the most sedate of the Seventy's officers, unless you saw the few inches of red-striped trousers which—Shamel!—could be seen beneath the dresses. The crowd shrieked with delight as these "ladies" raced down the track. Lieut. Ingram, attired in a handsome Mother Hubbard dress, crossed the line first. Then came Lieut. Carling, who "looked lovely" in a dressing gown and night-cap. Lieut. Westland was also a "Mother Hubbard," while Lieut. Macbeth was "striking" in a yellow skirt and a picture hat. Lieut. Andrews was "graciously lovely" in his new gown.

When the laugh aroused by "tact" event had subsided, the 100-yard dash, open to all soldiers, took place. There were fully 50 entries. First prize went to Lieut. Wilson, of the Seventy-seventh, Westworth Regiment. He and three brother lieutenants of the same regiment are taking a short course at Wolsley Barracks, and took part in yesterday's sports very successfully.

Mr. Wilson is an old Toronto University boy, and shows the results of the practice on the track that he acquired there. Pte. A. J. McLaughlin, Company E of the Seventh, took second, and third prize was won by Sergt. Will Rider, of C Company.

Then came a quarter-staff contest between Messrs. Sifton and Stewart. Twirling their poles skillfully over their heads, the two men showed the crowd how much science can be put into a fight with ordinary sticks. With their heads protected, the contestants did not mind many a hard smack on the cranium. Two rounds were given.

Rapid Tent Pitching.

The next was one of the star events of the afternoon, namely, the tent raising contest. Seven teams of four men each took part. It is marvelous how quickly a military tent can be erected by trained men. One man hammers in the pegs, another raises the canvas on a pole, while another fastens the guys. The following men did the work: Sergt. Good, Corp. Moule, Corp. Linwood and Pte. Lawrence. It was just exactly 2½ minutes from the time their tent was opened until the four men stood in front of the erected tent at attention, waiting the inspection of the judges. Company B, of the Seventh, came next, and a team from H Company third.

In the tent striking contest which followed immediately, the "regulars" were again successful. Company F took second place, and B came third. Thus B Company distinguished itself by getting two prizes. The members of this team were: Sergt. Skelton, Corps. McGregor and Thompson and Lance-Corp. Smith.

A company were unfortunate in the first of the contests. They finished third, but a couple of pegs got loose and came out after the squad had stood to attention.

Officers Took Relay Race.
The company relay race came next. Seven teams of four men each were entered from the Seventh, and the aforementioned four officers from the Seventy-seventh Regiment also took part. The article which had to be carried by the relays, from one man to the next, was no less than a rifle, and as the race was the full length of the course, the run was a pretty stiff one. The team from the Seventy-seventh, consisting of Lieuts. Bertram, Grafton, Clark and Wilson won out. Company B came second with the following was taken by the following team from Company H: Graham, Northcott, Treblecock and Geary.

Bayonet vs. sword, the weapons being in the hands of Messrs. Williams and Stewart, was the spectacular contest which was next on the programme. Stewart made five points and Williams three.

A picked company of non-coms, and men from the Seventh next gave an exhibition of physical drill on the platform, under the command of Capt. McCrimmon, and to the accompaniment of band music. The men wore white shirts, and the graceful way in which they went through various rhythmic movements with the rifle greatly pleased the crowd. The drill was a winner.

Sergt. Williams and Mr. Sifton, attired in hauberk and headpieces, which made them look like knights of old, then appeared on the track on horseback, and gave an exhibition of mounted broadsword fighting. Williams' horse was not a good animal for the purpose, but the contest was nevertheless, brisk. The clash of the swords, as the horses wheeled around each other, was enough to take one's mind far back to days when knighthood was in flower. Williams made 4 points while Sifton made 5.

New Sport in London.

The eyes of the spectators had wandered from time to time to a large leather globe, fully six feet in diameter, which lay in a dray in the ring. This was now hoisted out on to the track, and twenty soldiers ran out and formed up in two lines on each side of it. Whether the ball was solid and weighed 100 pounds or whether it was hollow the crowds did not know, until with a rush the opposing sides closed on the ball, and in a second it was dancing on top of twenty heads with forty hands striving to push it, some one way, some another.

This was a pushball match—the first of its kind that has ever been played in London—and which proved to be very exciting, as well as the chief novelty of the afternoon. The contesting teams were chosen from the officers, and from the non-coms, and men respectively. The team which pushed the great ball across a line at the rear of the other team's territory gained one point.

Up and down the ring the men strove, the ball now going dangerously near one of the two back lines and now the other. Now it would be pushed along the ground, now it would be shoved in the air and dance along the heads of the contestants. Now it would be at one side of the track and now the other. After 1½ minutes of desperate playing the officers sent the ball across their opponents' line, and 2½ minutes later they repeated the trick, giving them the game. Capt. Abbott was referee.

The teams were: Officers—Capt. Reid, McCrimmon and Beecher, Lieuts. Bentley, Andrews, Westland, Ingram (Seventh), and Lieuts. Wilson, Clark and Clark (Seventy-seventh). Men—Col. Sergt. Jacobs, Rider and Insley, Sergts. Foster Houghton and McDonald, Corp. Whitton, and Ptes. Hall, Dundas and Warren.

Pushball is a great game and it has come to stay as far as the Seventh is concerned. Next winter will see teams organized in the Armories to play the game.

With the pushball match military day in Queen's Park was concluded. There were several other events which were to have been put on, but these had to be called off on account of the lateness of the hour. So, donning their bus-bands and taking up their arms, which had been stacked in the ring, the Seventh took up their line of march like magic and moved off homeward to the cheers of the crowd.

The committee of the Seventh which arranged and carried out the military day deserves great credit for its work. Capt. Reid and Lieuts. Bentley and Macbeth were extremely active. Capt. Reid was president and Lieut. Bentley was secretary. Others who worked hard were, Lieut. Andrews, Capt. McCrimmon, Capt. Graham, Lieut. Westland and Lieut. Ingram.

LITERARY NOTES.

"Duncan Polite," by Marion Keith (published by the Westminster Company, Limited), is a story of the Scotch settlers on the shores of Lake Simcoe.

Donald McDonald, nicknamed "Polite," distinguishes himself from the host of other Canadian novelists by his fine types, skillfully portrayed, of the race that slept in Bible lore, who have translated to Canada those brave and gentle qualities which make old Scotia loved at home, revered abroad. The descriptions of Canadian rural life and merry-making are bright, true to life, and show a loving appreciation of the generous hospitality of this favored land. Kipling might learn from her what our climate really is, for this is how she describes one Dominion day: "It was one of those intensely clear, sunny days, which only 'Our Lady of the Sun-shine' can produce, a day when the thermometer announces that it is very hot, but when Nature denies the sun, and the blood dances to the time set by the bracing air."

During the fierce heat of August we try—if not bodily, at least mentally—to get away from frenzied life, political strife, and all other nerve-racking influences, and to do this we must read such matter as deals with the healthier side of life. The Outing Magazine is pre-mined in this field. The opening superbly illustrated article, "When the River Calls," by L. D. Sherburne, recounts the pleasures of a canoe trip down the Connecticut. What an important institution the free public bathhouses along New York's water front are, can be realized after reading "The Bath of the City," by Ralph D. Paine. Nearly 3,000,000 baths were taken in three months last year at the absurdly small cost to the city of a trifle more than one cent a bath. Besides a number of well-written articles on timely topics, Outing tells how to work and feed your dog in summer.

'Tis Prudent to Prevent Disease

A Little Care and Attention Now May Add Years of Comfort and Happiness to Your Life.

Disease does not, as a rule, develop in a few days or a few weeks. When you hear of people becoming victims of Bright's disease or dropping dead from heart failure you can depend upon it that they have been ailing for months and years. If you are on your guard against the first symptoms which tell of serious disease you can prevent the painful and fatal results.

When the back aches, when the bowels get constipated, when the liver becomes clogged and inactive and you suffer from indigestion you cannot afford to trust these troubles wearing away.

A few weeks' treatment with Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills will regulate and invigorate these organs and may save you years of suffering.
