Many Dramatic Moments.

While not the best played game of the series to date from the standpoint of technical baseball, it was so aboundand baseball, it was so aboundand baseball strategy that the 35,090 spectators who filled the stands were lifted to super-heights of enthusiasm by the struggle on the turf before them. New players mounted to niches in the world's series hall of fame, and others suffered the temporary censor of the fans, but when the winning run finally crossed the plate in the dusk, the general sentiment of the thousands was that it was a splendid game to win, and a trying one to lose.

The Braves rushed joyously from the field determined to clinch the championship title of 1914 with a fourth vice pionship title of 1914 with a fourth vice with a fark that it was a splendid game to win, and a trying one to lose.

Tyler kept his head and soon had two strikes on the heavy hitter. Then Tyler sent one down the alley that looked good, and Barry smashed it at Evers with such force that it almost knocked him down. Before the Braves' second baseman could recover himself Schang had flashed across the plate. Evers held the ball a moment, and Murphy, who had rounded third, kept on the third inning. Bush fouled out to Schmidt, and Murphy was retired on a sharply hit grounder, Evers to Schmidt, and Murphy was retired on a sharply hit grounder, Evers to Schmidt, and Murphy was retired on a sharply hit grounder, Evers to Schmidt, and Murphy was retired on a sharply hit grounder, Evers to Schmidt, and Murphy was retired on a sharply hit grounder, Evers hit the death in the death in the head and soon had two strikes on the heavy hitter. The vast crowd had settled backs some time before Umpire Klem called "play ball."

Both pitchers were going fine, and the eighth inning also was barren of results. Bush had great speed, and frequently mixed this up with a slow ball, while Tyler often used a slow curve. The hearts of the Boston fans almost stopped beating as Barry drove a hot two-bagger down the right field foul line. Evers encouraged Tyler, and there was cheering again when McInnis flied out to Connolly and Baker was held on second. The Boston battery looked at the Boston bench, and Walsh was purposely passed to first. Barry brought the inning to a close by sending a high foul to Gowdy. Tension grew as Boston came in for the ninth. The great crowd made a terrific din, but Pitcher Bush apparently paid no attention to it. He pitched steady ball and Boston went out in order. Schmidt and Deal were thrown out by Baker, and a hush fell over the great crowd as Barry threw out Maranville.

—Montreal Evening News.

BOSTON, Oct. 12.—In one of the most sensational games ever played in a world's series the Boston Braves defeated the Philadelphia Athletics at Fenway Park this afternoon by a score of 5 to 4. Twelve innings of thrilling baseball battle were necessary before the National League representatives could record their third consecutive victory of the world's series. So bitterly was the struggle contested by both teams that with the possible exception of the final game between the New York Giants and the Boston Red Sox in 1912, nothing equalling today's play has been recorded since the world's series began under National Commission auspices in 1962. For three hours and six minutes the teams alternately led, the Athletics having forged ahead in the first inning, and the game, which was begun in bright sunlight was finished with the evening star glimmering over head and the electric signs lighted up outside.

While not the best played game of the series to date from the standpoint of technical baseball, it was so aboundaing in dramatic moments, thrilling plays and baseball strategy that the 35,000 spectators who filled the stands were to stife to super-heights of enthusiasm by the struggle on the turf before them, by That Thrilling Tenth.

Boston fared no better in its half of the third. Baker scooped up Moran's grass-cutter, and tossed him out. Evers dropped a little grounder to Bush, and was also retired. Connolly gave Murphy a long fly in right field.
